Concluding transactions with Contracts for Differences and other OTC derivative instruments on a margin basis

Art.48(1) BenchMark Finance provides an opportunity to execute client orders regarding OTC derivative contracts - Contracts for Differences (CFDs) - CFDs on shares, CFDs on commodities, CFDs on currencies, CFDs on indices, CFDs on metals, CFDs on cryptocurrencies and other OTC derivative instruments. The specific financial instruments that can be traded by the clients, as well as the types of orders that the client can submit/place, are determined by BenchMark Finance depending on (subject to) the rules of the respective market of financial instruments. They are announced on the website of BenchMark Finance - www.benchmark.bg.

With regard to these instruments, BenchMark Finance is counterparty and the only place to execute the orders of its clients, as all orders are executed outside the trading venue, only OTC market. The transaction is concluded directly between the client and BenchMark Finance on an individual basis at pre-agreed conditions. Financial instruments purchased by the client shall be issued by BenchMark Finance.

Transactions with these financial instruments are of high risk, BenchMark Finance informs clients that under certain market conditions, in case of emergency or other undesirable situation, the market principles of trading in derivative financial instruments on the OTC market provide broad and extraordinary authority (powers) to the financial instruments issuer.

(2) For each individual transaction the client receives from BenchMark Finance a quotation through the electronic trading platform or by telephone, in compliance with the requirements for communication between BenchMark Finance and the client. Transactions are carried out through orders submitted through the relevant e-commerce platform, as well as on the basis of orders submitted by telephone. BenchMark Finance provides its clients with buy and sell quotes for the respective financial instruments. Quotes are valid till they are changed or cancelled. The quotations may change in the period between the submission of the client's order and its execution according to the market dynamics, which BenchMark Finance is not responsible/liable for.

Upon a request from the client for a price, BenchMark Finance always quotes bilaterally - price "buy" and price "sell" ("bid" and "ask" price). When the client intends to buy a financial instrument, he/she confirms the "sell" price and vice versa, if he/she wants to sell an asset, he/she confirms the "buy" price, provided to him by BenchMark Finance.

(3) As the only place for execution of the orders of its clients, BenchMark Finance generates independently and provides prices (quotations) at which the trade in contracts for differences (CFD) is carried out on the OTC market. The prices (quotations) offered by BenchMark Finance are not tied to and may differ from the prices (quotations) elsewhere for the performance of analogous or similar contracts for differences (CFDs). BenchMark Finance fulfills the conditions for fair pricing of its products in accordance with regulatory requirements and good practices.

(4) BenchMark Finance has the right at its own discretion to suspend the offering of quotations for a financial instrument by notifying the client and giving him at least seven days in which the client to take appropriate action to close his positions. If the client does not do so, BenchMark Finance has the right at its discretion and without notice to close the client's positions opened in this financial instrument and the client agrees that BenchMark Finance may at its discretion determine the closing price, taking into account applicable market prices. BenchMark Finance will not be liable for the negative result for the client, as well as for any lost profits or losses incurred by the client, if the investment intermediary has taken all necessary actions to protect the client's interests and achieve the best result according to the applicable current market prices.

(5) Depending on factors such as unusual market conditions, the size of the order or the type of the order, the respective financial instrument may receive a price in part or in full and / or the execution of the order may be delayed during its processing, which may affect the price. , on which the order is executed, and this can be both in favor and to the detriment of the client. BenchMark Finance strives to use procedures that minimize the risk of delays, however, in case of force majeure, during important news and other events and factors that may have or affect the relevant markets, BenchMark Finance could not maintain normal liquidity in the same volumes. The possible effects of the influence of these factors are unpredictable and therefore cannot be listed/stated in these General Terms and Conditions. In such situations, it is possible to significantly expand the spreads compared to the usual and when submitting market, limited, stop or other types of orders to enter into transactions at prices significantly different from those that would have been concluded under normal market conditions, and at prices different from the one last seen by the client for the financial instrument in the platform or at a price different from the one visible to the client at the time of submitting the order.

(6) The Client has been notified and agrees that BenchMark Finance may not provide quotations if there are unforeseen / extraordinary market circumstances or force majeure events under item 17 and item 18 under §1 of the Final Provisions of these General Terms and Conditions or other circumstances under which transactions may not be executed on the respective markets. Providing CFD quotes with underlying asset such as stocks, indices, futures, exchange traded funds, futures on energy raw materials (oil, natural gas), cryptocurrencies or other exchange traded assets may sometimes not be possible in the first 15 (fifteen) minutes from opening or before closing of the trading session, or in case of sharp fluctuations and lack of sufficient liquidity, the spread between the "buy" and "sell" prices may be relatively wider than usual quotes. In this case, BenchMark Finance is not liable for damages, lost profits or losses incurred by the client.

(7) The Client is notified and agrees that when executing an order submitted by a client, when there are sharp fluctuations in market quotations, as well as at opening or at closing the relevant markets (including the so-called "gap"), BenchMark Finance may execute the client order, including limit orders, one-cancels-the-other, conditional, limit or stop orders at a price significantly different from the one specified in the order, respectively visible to the client at the time of order submission (including the so-called "slippage") or possibly given order, one-cancels-the-other, condition, limit or stop price cannot be fulfilled.

(8) When due to technical reasons, the client is temporarily unable to use the electronic trading system, the relevant orders may be submitted by telephone on a recording telephone line in compliance with the Rules for submission of telephone orders published on the intermediary's website. BenchMark Finance may not execute an order given by telephone to the client if he doubts his/her identity.

(9) BenchMark Finance accepts as valid any order submitted through the electronic trading platform to open or close positions under contracts for differences or other derivative financial instruments, with a valid username and password, without the need for additional confirmation of the order by the client. BenchMark Finance is not liable for damages resulting from the improper use of the client's access to the electronic trading platform by a third party.

(10) In the cases where, due to the fault of the client or as a result of objective circumstances, which do not depend on (beyond the influence of) BenchMark Finance and which BenchMark Finance is not liable for and that could not had been prevented by due care, the client cannot and/or does not manage to contact BenchMark Finance, or BenchMark Finance has not received a message sent by the client, or the client has not received a message sent by BenchMark Finance, BenchMark Finance is not liable for:

1. losses incurred by the client, missed benefits(gains), damages or expenses in connection with an action, delay or omission, when these losses, missed benefits(gains), damages or expenses have arisen as a result of the inability of the client to make a deal;
2. when losses, missed benefits(gains), damages and expenses for the client have arisen as a result of the inability of the client to close an open position or the client has missed benefits (gain) due to inability to open a position.

Art.49 (1) The client is informed and agrees as possible that while trading in real time, with a view to technological transmission time of the order, the quotes of certain financial instruments are changed in the period between submission of the order by the client and receipt of the order by/with BenchMark Finance. In this case, BenchMark Finance can execute the order on/at the quotation available at the time of its execution.

(2) BenchMark Finance strives to execute client orders as quickly as possible after their entry into the servers of the MetaTrader 4/5 platform, but nevertheless during low liquidity and / or high volatility, and/or depending on the type of financial instrument , and/or the current load on the servers and the flow of orders arriving at the same time, the execution time of client orders in the servers may vary and the investment intermediary may not be able to maintain the same speed and/or liquidity/probability of execution, as usual. Such market conditions cannot be foreseen/predicted and can occur at any time of the day, which will lead to an extension of the execution time of orders for an indefinite period of time. It should be borne in mind that delays in the execution of client orders may have a negative effect on the balance of client trading accounts, which may lead to a shortage of funds and the closure of positions.

(3) Clients should keep in mind that in cases when they submit orders and/or their orders enter the system of BenchMark Finance / the servers of the MetaTrader 4/5 platform and / or their orders are executed in the last minutes of the working hours on Friday trading sessions. or before a public holiday, in the first minutes after the markets' opening on Monday or after a public holiday and in the minutes around midnight when swap figures/values are charged on positions, these periods are characterized by low liquidity, therefore the execution time increases in compared to the time for which client orders are usually executed during the rest of the time (a few hours earlier, for example).

(4) BenchMark Finance shall not be liable for any losses or missed benefits (gains) from client based on quotes that as a result of problems with the internet connection in terms of delay or lack of connectivity does not reflect in true and fair manner the prices quoted by BenchMark Finance. Transactions, at the conclusion of which the client relied on a delay in the renewal of the quotations, can be cancelled/revoked by BenchMark Finance. BenchMark Finance is also entitled to make adjustments and changes in such kinds of transactions concluded by the client. Client accounts through which such transactions are executed may, at BenchMark Finance's own discretion, be deactivated or the client's access to the trading platform be suspended.

Art.50 (1) BenchMark Finance seeks to quote the spread levels indicated on the intermediary's website, but nevertheless during low liquidity and/or high volatility the investment intermediary is likely to be unable to maintain the same spread levels as it normally quotes. Such market conditions cannot be foreseen and can occur at any time of the day, which will lead to widening spreads over a period of time. It should be borne in mind that wider spreads may have a negative effect on the balance of clients' trading accounts, which may lead to a shortage of funds and the closure of positions.

(2) BenchMark Finance has the right, at its own discretion, to suspend trading or add new financial instruments to the trading platforms by notifying customers in advance. When a financial instrument is suspended from trading, the investment intermediary shall notify clients at least seven days before the suspension of trading in order to ensure a sufficient period of time for the client to take specific action at their own discretion regarding their open positions in the financial instrument which will be suspended before their positions are closed by BenchMark Finance.

The established term of at least seven days notice before the suspension of trading in a financial instrument will not be observed by the investment intermediary in case of unforeseen/extraordinary market circumstances and/or force majeure or circumstances under item 17 or item 18 of §1 of the Final Provisions of these general terms. In the event of suspension of trading of a financial instrument, BenchMark Finance has the right to close all existing positions of the client at prices relevant to the time of closing. Notice of suspension of trading in certain instruments or the addition of new trading instruments may be made by means of a message on the trading platform, an email, a telephone call to the email address and/or telephone number provided by the client or via news uploaded on the BenchMark Finance website.

In determining the amount of the guarantee deposit both for the client and for the financial instrument, BenchMark Finance complies with the requirements set by the Financial Supervision Commission (FSC), the European Securities and Markets Authority (ESMA) and/or by the supervisory authorities of other Member States of the European Union, if such requirements exist (if the case). In case of change of the regulatory requirements and/or setting of new requirements by FSC, ESMA and/or supervisory bodies of other Member States of the European Union, BenchMark Finance changes the amount of the minimum required guarantee deposit/margin, both for certain financial instruments and for individual clients.

(3) BenchMark Finance may in its sole discretion, without the need for prior notice, consent or approval from the client to change the amount of the minimum required margin, including already open client positions for certain financial instruments and for individual orders and/or items or client accounts:

II. EXECUTION FACTORS. PRINCIPLES FOR DETERMINING PLACES FOR EXECUTION

5. Factors for executing client orders in the best interest of the client

5.1 BenchMark Finance assesses the relative importance of the following factors in order to achieve the best execution of client orders:

- Price of the financial instrument
- Costs related to the execution of the order
- Order size
- Speed of execution
- Probability of execution and settlement
- Type and nature of the order
- Other factors related to the execution of the order

5.2 Price: The price which the client will receive or will pay for the execution of his order is a paramount factor for satisfying the criteria for ensuring the best execution of client orders and for obtaining the best possible result for the client. The price of the financial instruments is determined on the basis of the "bid" and "ask" offers and is influenced by the pricing process for the specific place of execution.

5.3 Costs: All costs that are directly related to the execution of the order, incl. place of execution fees, clearing and settlement fees, as well as other fees and charges payable to third parties linked to the execution of the order. Usually the costs are decisive for the choice of location for the execution of customer orders. BenchMark Finance does not have the right to determine and collect commissions in a way that unfairly differentiates the places of execution.

5.4 Size: The size of a client order is usually directly related to the price of the financial instruments and the transaction costs (for example, an order that is for a volume that is larger than the normal market size). Apart from the price, the size of the client's order is of special importance for the speed and probability of execution.

5.5 Speed of execution: This is the time interval from the submission of an eligible order to the confirmation of its execution from the place of execution. BenchMark Finance makes every effort to execute any order as early as possible, which is usually possible on the most representative market for a particular financial instrument. Taking this factor into account enables the client to make the most of the movement on the market, which is in his/her best interest as well. The speed of implementation can be especially important in cases of high market volatility and rapid changes in instrument prices.

5.6 Probability of execution and settlement: This refers to the probability that an order submitted by the client will be fully executed at a given place of execution. In illiquid financial instruments or illiquid markets, the probability of execution is a significant factor. The Secured settlement concerns the timeliness of the transaction, without delay, can be an important factor, especially in the case of large-volume orders, as well as in the case of orders submitted by a professional client. Depending on this, and to the extent that BenchMark Finance is aware of the further intentions and goals of the specific client, this factor may gain significant weight in meeting the criteria to ensure the best execution of client orders and to obtain the best possible result for the client.

5.7 Nature of the order: The characteristics of the client's order can have a significant impact on the choice of place of execution, in order to achieve optimal price and speed. For example, an order that has unusual characteristics such as an extended or shortened settlement period, its execution may differ from the way a standard order is executed. In this regard, the characteristics of the client's order can have a significant impact on the choice of place of execution, in order to achieve optimal price and speed.

5.8 Other factors: These include, without being fully listed, clearing systems, possible future costs of storing financial instruments subject to a specific order, tax liabilities, etc. BenchMark Finance evaluates the relevance of these factors to the extent that the customer is aware of them at the time the order is executed.

6. Significance of the factors

6.1 The relative importance of the performance factors in each case is determined by the following criteria:

- the characteristics of the client, including whether he/she is identified as a non-professional or professional client;
- the characteristics of the client's order, including whether the order is linked to a securities financing transaction or, for example, the ability of the execution of the order to have an impact on the market;
- the characteristics of the financial instruments which are subject to the order - such as liquidity and the presence of a regulated market or other trading venue;
- the characteristics of the execution venues to which the order may be directed for execution (in cases when BenchMark Finance does not act as the sole execution venue and counterparty to the transactions). The characteristics of the place of execution may, for example, be related to the characteristics of the sources of liquidity that are available to BenchMark Finance at a given place of performance.

6.2 When executing an order submitted by a non-professional client, the best execution of the order and the achievement of the best possible result for the client is determined by the total value of the transaction, including the price of the financial instrument and the costs related to execution.

6.3 Execution costs include all costs that are directly related to the execution of the order, including fees at the place of execution of orders, clearing and settlement fees, as well as other fees paid to third parties involved in the execution of the order.

6.4 In order to be achieved the best possible result for the client in the cases where more than one competitive execution venue exist and for the assessment and the comparison of the results that could be achieved for non-professional client for the execution of the order on each of the execution venues, mentioned in this Policy, that are appropriate for the execution, the commission of BenchMark Finance and the expenses for the order execution on each of the possible trading venues are taken into account. The speed, probability of execution, settlement, size, nature of the order may have an advantage over the cost and the cost of execution, only insofar as they are a tool for achieving the best possible result from the non-professional client point of view.

6.5 For execution of orders which are submitted by professional clients, in most cases, the costs will also be decisive for achieving the best result for the client. However, BenchMark Finance will evaluate the importance of the factors on a case-by-case basis.

6.6 In assessing whether the best execution is achieved, BenchMark Finance does not consider its standard fees that should be paid by the client, regardless of how the order is executed.

6.7 When executing orders or when deciding to trade OTC products, including individual products, BenchMark Finance verifies the correctness of the price offered to the customer by collecting market data used in the price evaluation of that product and, if possible, by comparing it with similar products. or comparable products.

7. Principles for determining the places for execution of client orders

7.1 Client orders are executed mainly on a trading venue - regulated market, Multilateral trading facility (MTF) or Organized trading facility OTF, or off-site (OTC market).

7.2 Based on an assessment of the performance factors and performance criteria, BenchMark Finance may select one or more performance locations. Client orders can be executed outside the trading venue, including the cases where BenchMark Finance trades for its own account by buying and selling financial instruments at prices determined by it.

The used places may include:

- Regulated market
- Multilateral trading facility (MTF)
- Organized trading facility (OTF)
- Liquidity provided by BenchMark Finance or other liquidity providers
- If the infrastructure of the financial instruments market allows, client orders may also be executed against a systematic participant or market maker

7.3 BenchMark Finance may not structure or accrue its commissions in a manner that unfairly discriminates against order execution venues. BenchMark Finance shall take all measures not to discriminate against the execution venues, except on the basis of the execution factors relevant to the order in question.

7.4 BenchMark Finance is not entitled to receive remuneration, discount or non-monetary benefit for submitting an order to a specific trading venue or for executing an order, if in this way it violates the requirements for managing conflicts of interest, disclosing information to the client, rules for providing independent investment advice, restrictions on the receipt of commissions and benefits, the assessment of appropriate service, the terms of the contract, the rules for the creation and offering of financial instruments. (Art. 84, para. 1 - 3, Art. 65, para. 1, item 7, Art. 70 - 74, Art. 76 - 82 and Art. 99 of FIMA - Financial Instruments Markets Act).

7.5 If BenchMark Finance applies different fees depending on the venue, the investment firm explains these differences in sufficient detail to enable the client to understand the advantages and disadvantages associated with choosing a single venue.

7.6 BenchMark Finance warns that any specific instructions from the client may prevent the investment firm from taking the measures provided for and applied in this Policy to achieve the best possible results in the execution of these orders in relation to the elements covered by these instructions.

7.7 Financial instruments for which execution is possible only in one execution venue is considered that by executing in this place, BenchMark Finance has achieved the best result for the client.

7.8 BenchMark Finance may transfer a client order for execution to its counterparties, which directly or through a broker are members of a respective trading venue or execution venue to which BenchMark Finance does not have direct access, acting in accordance with the best interests of its customers and this Policy.

7.9 BenchMark Finance also complies with the requirements of this Policy when providing a portfolio management service and executing orders, on behalf and for the account of the client whose portfolio it manages, including when transmitting them to its counterparties.

7.10 BenchMark Finance may execute client orders on a non-regulated (OTC) market directly with another investment broker, with a BenchMark Finance client or directly with BenchMark Finance acting on its own account. In accordance with the regulatory requirements, BenchMark Finance informs its clients about this possibility and is obliged to obtain the prior consent of its clients before proceeding with the execution of their orders outside the trading venue. This consent may be given in the form of principle consent, as well as in the form of consent in respect of individual transactions. For the cases of execution of orders of clients outside the trading place, which are described in this Policy, it is considered that BenchMark Finance has received the prior consent of its clients to be executed outside the trading place.

7.11 BenchMark Finance notifies the client in advance of all significant parameters of the transaction, which may be concluded outside the trading venue in execution of the client's order. When the client submits an order for concluding a transaction with a contract for differences or with foreign currency on a margin basis, or with another financial instrument, which is not allowed to trade on a regulated market, through an electronic trading system, the client is considered to be notified of all essential parameters of the transaction.

7.12 When executing client orders, BenchMark Finance uses such execution venues for each of the classes of financial instruments offered by the broker, which allow it to permanently achieve the best execution of orders and to obtain the best possible result for the client.

III. PLACES FOR EXECUTION OF CLIENT ORDERS

We provide information on the execution venues that the investment firm relies on for each class of financial instruments offered by BenchMark Finance to execute orders from retail, professional clients and eligible counterparties, including the relative importance of execution factors depending on the nature of the various financial instruments presented by classes according to the classification in Annex I of Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) 2017/576.

8. Execution of client orders regarding financial instruments admitted to a trading venue - regulated market, MTF or OTF

8.1 (Amended by a decision of the Board of Directors dated 29.11.2021) BenchMark Finance provides execution of client orders regarding financial instruments admitted to trading on a regulated market, MTF or OTF, as follows: equity instruments - shares and depository receipts; debt instruments - bonds and money market instruments; government securities; exchange traded products - exchange traded funds, exchange traded bonds and exchange traded goods (ETF, ETN, ETC); other instruments traded on the trading venue - rights, warrants, compensatory notes and vouchers, indices and others admitted to trading on a regulated market, MTF or OTF.

With regard to these instruments, BenchMark Finance provides its clients, categorized as non-professional, professional or eligible counterparty, with the opportunity to perform in the following places:

- (Amended by a decision of the Board of Directors of 29.11.2021) Regulated market and Multilateral trading facility - SME Beam Growth Market, organized by the Bulgarian Stock Exchange AD (BSE). Instruments admitted to a regulated market on the BSE cannot be traded on the MTF - SME Beam Growth Market, and vice versa. BenchMark Finance executes the orders directly in compliance with the relevant Trading Rules of the Bulgarian Stock Exchange, applicable to a regulated market or to MTF SME Growth Market Beam. With regard to most instruments admitted to trading on the regulated market and MTFs organized by the BSE, these trading venues are the only place of execution. The advantage of the markets organized by BSE as a place of execution is related to their physical location on the territory of the Republic of Bulgaria, trade on both markets organized by BSE is carried out through the trading platform of Deutsche Börse - T7® and there is no difference in the rules. of trading, financial instruments are traded continuously on the same schedule of trading sessions in both markets, which greatly facilitates consumers. Another very important advantage is the introduced favorable tax regime and tax reliefs in terms of personal income and capital gains of legal entities, realized by disposing of financial instruments in these markets, which are not subject to taxation. With regard to trade in the SME Beam Growth Market, it should be clarified that the tax relief applies for the period from 01.01.2021 to 31.12.2025.

The better commission policy of these performance sites compared to foreign ones should also be taken into account. Given the fact that the BSE trades financial instruments issued mainly by Bulgarian companies, this allows for the execution of client orders in the amount specified by the client, and the price of these instruments is formed on the same market where they will be bought or sold. There are also instruments that are traded only on the BSE, such as compensatory instruments, and this is the only place to execute orders with them. BenchMark Finance offers its clients an electronic trading platform, providing direct electronic access (DER) for the execution of their orders on the BSE. Thus, the implementation of the BSE is with significant speed, high probability of implementation, easy access at any time during working hours on the regulated market and MTFs organized by the BSE.

- (New with a decision of the Board of Directors dated 29.11.2021) Multilateral trading facility - MTF BSE International, organized by the Bulgarian Stock Exchange AD (BSE). BenchMark Finance executes the orders directly in accordance with the Trading Rules of the Bulgarian Stock Exchange. The instruments admitted to MTF BSE

International are traded through the T7® trading platform of the German market operator Deutsche Borse and follow the same trading rules as those on the BSE Main Market. The instruments are admitted ex officio by the BSE on the basis of expected interest from investors. All instruments on the MTF BSE International market have a registered market maker - Tradegate AG, which makes their liquidity extremely high. The transactions are carried out on the basis of the purchase and sale orders entered by the exchange members and the quotations of the market makers. The main advantage of MTF BSE International as a place of performance is that it provides an opportunity for local investors to diversify their portfolios with financial instruments issued by some of the most famous and liquid companies in the world. Customers can take advantage of real-time quotes for all instruments admitted to the market, which are practically identical in price to those listed on major European stock exchanges. Clients who have invested in financial instruments purchased on the MTF BSE International market can exercise all their rights under the instrument by receiving guaranteed rights upon merger, acquisition or division of the issuer, as well as cash or dividends in shares. Dividends are received directly on the client's account with the investment intermediary. BenchMark Finance's e-trading platform, providing direct electronic access (DER) for the execution of BSE orders, offers customers direct uninterrupted access to the MTF BSE International market at any time according to the schedule of the trading session in this market.

- Off-site trading (OTC) market - directly as a counterparty is another investment intermediary, or a client of BenchMark Finance, or directly with BenchMark Finance, acting at its own expense, at its discretion and provided that the client is notified in advance and explicitly consent to this, and the best performance will be achieved for the customer.
- (Amended by a decision of the Board of Directors dated 29.11.2021) Multilateral trading facility (MTF) - not directly, as BenchMark Finance transmits the execution order from its counterparties, which are members of such a system directly or through a broker. When the financial instrument to which the specific client order relates is traded on both a regulated market and a multilateral trading facility, and in the absence of explicit instructions from the client on the place of execution, BenchMark Finance will determine it in accordance with this Policy.
- With regard to orders for Bulgarian government securities issued by the Ministry of Finance, BenchMark Finance executes orders on the BSE and on the Multilateral trading facility, as well as on the interbank market. BenchMark Finance executes orders for transactions in government securities issued by other countries on a multilateral trading facility.

8.3 The relative importance of performance factors in trading in debt instruments - bonds and money market instruments, from the most significant to the least significant factor, as follows: 1. Price; 2. Size; 3. Speed / speed of execution; 4. Settlement / probability of execution; 5. Costs; 6. Individual characteristics and considerations related to the execution of the order.

8.4 The relative importance of performance factors in trading in exchange-traded products - exchange-traded funds, exchange-traded bonds and exchange-traded commodities (ETF, ETN, ETC), indices admitted to trading on the BSE, from the most significant to the least significant factor as follows: 1. Price; 2. Size; 3. Speed / speed of execution; 4. Settlement / probability of execution; 5. Costs; 6. Individual characteristics and considerations related to the execution of the order.

8.5 (Amended by a decision of the Board of Directors of 29.11.2021) The relative importance of the factors for execution in trading with other instruments traded on the trading venue - rights, warrants, compensatory notes and vouchers and others admitted to trading on a regulated market or MTF , from the most significant to the least significant factor, as follows: 1. Price; 2. Size; 3. Speed / speed of execution; 4. Settlement / probability of execution; 5. Costs; 6. Individual characteristics and considerations related to the execution of the order.

8.6 The relative importance of the factors for performance in trading in government securities from the most significant to the least significant factor, as follows: 1. Price; 2. Size; 3. Speed / speed of execution; 4. Settlement / probability of execution; 5. Costs; 6. Individual characteristics and considerations related to the execution of the order.

8.7 When executing orders of a non-professional client or a professional client, in principle the best execution is determined by the price and the costs of execution. BenchMark Finance takes into account the total amount that the client will receive or pay, which includes both the price of the financial instrument itself and all costs associated with the execution of the client's order, incl. fees for the place of execution, fees for clearing and settlement, as well as other fees and fees payable to third parties related to the execution of the order. The costs for implementation on the BSE are specified in the BenchMark Finance Tariff.

8.8 The probability of execution is assessed taking into account the nature of the order - size, validity, price and the availability of sufficient liquidity. "Sufficient liquidity" means the existence of such demand or supply (depending on the type of order) of the specific financial instrument to which the client order relates, where the relevant order can be executed immediately, and in BenchMark Finance's discretion would lead to a distortion of demand and supply, respectively.8.9 When assessing the place of execution, the speed of execution, the probability of settlement and other aspects of the transaction, such as the supervision of the trade, insofar as they are important for achieving the best possible result for the client.

8.10 (Amended by a decision of the Board of Directors dated 29.11.2021) The financial instruments admitted to trading on the BSE - regulated market and the multilateral trading facilities - Growth Market of MTF Beam and MTF BSE International are traded at their real value. The parties to the transaction acquire all rights and obligations under the financial instruments (property and non-property). The acquirer of the financial instruments is obliged to pay the full value of the financial instruments together with the fees and commissions for BSE and BenchMark Finance included in the value of the transaction, according to the BenchMark Finance Tariff. The transferor of the financial instruments is entitled to receive the full value of the financial instruments, subject of the transaction, reduced by the due fees and commissions of BSE and BenchMark Finance, according to the Tariff of BenchMark Finance. The transfer of financial instruments is performed by a depository institution, which may be Central Depository AD or another depository institution in which the instruments are registered, with settlement, which is two days after the date of concluding the transaction on the BSE. If the transaction is exceptionally concluded outside the trading venue, on the OTC market - directly between the parties, the transfer of financial instruments is made in the depository institution with a settlement of one day.

8.11 BenchMark Finance provides an opportunity for direct electronic access (DEA) to a trading venue on the BSE through the electronic trading system BG Trader. When providing DEA, BenchMark Finance has effective control systems and mechanisms that ensure compliance with the following requirements:

8.11.1. performs assessment, as well as regular review of the assessment of customers whether the service is appropriate and appropriate for them;

8.11.2. customers using the service may not exceed the relevant pre-set trading thresholds and credit limits;

8.11.3. the investment intermediary duly monitors the trading performed by the clients using the service by automatically blocking, revoking client orders, stopping flows of client orders, temporarily terminating or denying services to a client of DEA in the cases provided by the regulations and rules of the trading venue;

8.11.4. Risk control mechanisms shall not allow transactions that may create risks for the investment firm, lead to market disruptions, or transactions that are contrary to Regulation (EU) N° 596/2014 or the rules of place of trade.

8.11.5. Monitors the concluded transactions in order to establish violations of the requirements, illegal trade or behavior that may be related to market abuse and for which it notifies the FSC.

8.12 Due to the specifics of the electronic trading platforms (such as the electronic trading system BG Trader), which are accessed via the Internet, it is possible that technical malfunctions may occur both in the hardware and software used by BenchMark Finance and in the hardware used by the client. products and systems or access devices. It is also possible for communication failures to occur, leading to delays or non-arrival of orders, or to execution, respectively non-execution of already submitted orders, as well as to inability to access trading platforms and others.

9. Execution of client orders on OTC derivative contracts - CFDs - CFDs on stocks, CFDs on commodities, CFDs on currencies, CFDs on indices, CFDs on metals, CFDs on cryptocurrencies and other derivatives

9.1 BenchMark Finance provides execution of client orders on OTC derivative contracts - difference contracts (CFDs) - CFDs on shares, CFDs on commodities, CFDs on currencies, CFDs on indices, CFDs on metals, CFDs on cryptocurrencies and other OTC derivatives. With respect to these instruments, BenchMark Finance is a counterparty and the only place to execute the orders of its clients, categorized as non-professional, professional or acceptable counterparty, as all orders are executed outside the trading venue, only on the OTC market.

9.2 With regard to trading in these financial instruments traded on the OTC market, BenchMark Finance executes the orders by being a counterparty to each transaction. The transaction is concluded directly between the client and BenchMark Finance on an individual basis under pre-agreed terms. The financial instruments purchased by the client through the MetaTrader 4 and 5 platforms are issued by BenchMark Finance.

9.3 The relative importance of performance factors in OTC derivative trading - CFDs for all types of CFDs offered by BenchMark Finance regardless of the type of CFD, from the most significant to the least significant factor, as follows: 1. Price; 2. Size; 3. Speed / speed of execution; 4. Probability of performance; 5. Costs; 6. Individual characteristics and considerations related to the execution of the order.

It is important to note that in certain circumstances, BenchMark Finance may prioritize the best execution of high volume orders at a time of high volatility and / or low liquidity, the speed and / or probability of execution that may take precedence over cost and performance costs factors.

9.4 In connection with the execution of clients' orders for trading in over-the-counter CFD derivatives, there is no alternative place for execution, therefore the due fees and commissions may not vary depending on the client or the place of execution, BenchMark Finance does not receive from third parties (which are in themselves places of execution) payments and incentives, and does not receive remuneration, discount or non-monetary benefit for the transfer of a client order to a specific place of trade or place of execution of orders. BenchMark Finance charges its clients only the fees specified in the Tariff of BenchMark Finance, which states the value of all benefits received by the intermediary.

9.5 Consequences and risks for the clients from the fact that BenchMark Finance executes orders for trading with contracts for differences (CFD) outside the trading place:

BenchMark Finance is the place of execution and counterparty to each transaction and therefore the client's trading opportunities are limited to the availability of BenchMark Finance's own liquidity;

the prices at which it is traded are determined (quoted) by BenchMark Finance and not by a counter-interest of another client;

the execution time of the client's orders may vary, there is no specific or fixed time in which BenchMark Finance commits or should execute orders received from clients;

the prices (quotations) offered by BenchMark Finance may differ from the prices (quotations) elsewhere for the performance of the respective contracts for differences (CFD);

there is a potential conflict of interest, BenchMark Finance gains from the trading volumes that the client has realized, as the investment intermediary realizes a profit in situations where the client loses funds;

the instruments offered for trading are not transferable and the client cannot move them to another investment intermediary or to another place for trading;

the trading rules that apply to the OTC market are different from the trading rules that apply to the trading venue.

9.6 As the only place to execute the orders of its clients, BenchMark Finance generates independently and provides the prices (quotations) at which the difference contracts (CFDs) are traded on the OTC market. The prices (quotations) offered by BenchMark Finance are not linked to and may differ from, the prices (quotations) elsewhere for the performance of similar or similar contracts for differences (CFDs). BenchMark Finance fulfills the conditions for fair pricing of its products in accordance with regulatory requirements and good practices.

9.7 Depending on the strategy and policy of BenchMark Finance, in cases of regulatory restrictions or those imposed by supervisory authorities, not all products may be available to non-professional customers.

9.8 For each individual transaction, the client receives a quote from BenchMark Finance via the electronic trading platform or by telephone, in compliance with the general requirements for communication between BenchMark Finance and the client. When the client requests a price, BenchMark Finance always quotes bilaterally - price "buy" and price "sell". When the client intends to buy a financial instrument, he confirms the "sell" price and vice versa, if he wants to sell an asset, he confirms the "buy" price provided to him by BenchMark Finance.

9.9 BenchMark Finance forms its prices (quotations) independently by combining and / or comparing the quotations published by one or several independent information sources. For this purpose, BenchMark Finance has access to the published data on the prices (quotations) of at least one information source: liquidity provider and / or quotation provider, investment intermediary, stock exchange, market maker or other specific place where the underlying asset is traded. or a derivative of the relevant financial instruments.

9.10 Depending on factors such as unusual market conditions, the size of the order or the type of order, the relevant financial instrument may receive a price in part or in full and / or the execution of the order may be delayed in processing, which may affect the price at which the order is executed, and this can be both for the benefit and to the detriment of the client. BenchMark Finance strives to use procedures that minimize the risk of delays, however, in case of force majeure, during important news and other events and factors that may have or affect the relevant market, BenchMark Finance would not maintain normal liquidity in the same volumes. The possible effects of the influence of these factors are unpredictable and therefore cannot be specified in the current policy. In such situations, it is possible to significantly expand the spreads compared to the usual and when submitting market, limited, stop or other types of orders to conclude deals at prices significantly different from those that would be concluded under normal market conditions, as and at prices different from the one last seen by the client for the financial instrument in the platform or at a price different from the one visible to the client at the time of submitting the order.

9.11 BenchMark Finance may not provide quotations if there are circumstances in which transactions cannot be made on the respective markets. Providing CFDs with underlying assets, stocks, indices, futures, exchange traded funds, futures on energy commodities (oil, natural gas) and other exchange traded assets may sometimes not be possible within the first 15 (fifteen) minutes of opening or before the closing of the stock exchange session or in case of sharp fluctuations and lack of sufficient liquidity, the spread between the "buy" and "sell" prices may be relatively wider than the usual quotation.

9.12 When executing an order submitted by the client, when there are sharp fluctuations in market quotations, as well as when opening or closing the relevant markets for the underlying instruments (including the so-called "gap"), BenchMark Finance can execute the client's order, including limited orders, OCO, conditional, limited or stop orders at a price significantly different from the one indicated in the order, respectively from the one visible to the client at the moment of submitting the order (including the so-called "slippage") or an order, OCO, condition, limit or stop price can not be met.

9.13 In real-time trading, it is possible, in view of the technological time for transmission of the order, the quotations of certain financial instruments to change in the period between the submission of the order by the client and the receipt of the order by BenchMark Finance. In this case, BenchMark Finance can execute the order on the quotation available at the time of its execution.

9.14 Clients need to be aware that as a issuer of contracts for differences (CFDs) and other derivative financial instruments, the only place to execute client orders and a counterparty in terms of trading with them, BenchMark Finance is not bound by a specific or fixed time for execution of client orders.

9.15 BenchMark Finance does not have information about the exact moment when the customer has submitted his order through the MetaTrader 4/5 customer terminal of the electronic device used by the customer (computer, tablet, mobile smartphone, etc.), as such information does not enter the servers of the MetaTrader 4/5 platform. BenchMark Finance has information about the client's order from the moment the order is received in the system of BenchMark Finance / the servers of the MetaTrader 4/5 platform.

In this regard, customers should keep in mind that the main reason for delaying the receipt of customer orders is the quality of the customer's Internet connection and / or the technical characteristics of the communication devices used by the customer. The time may vary depending on the speed of the internet connection, the internet provider, the technical characteristics, incl. hardware and software, determining the power, stability and reliability of the communication devices used by the customer, through which he has access to the Internet and to trading platforms (computer, mobile smartphone, tablet, etc.), the Internet route through which his connection passes, the physical location of the client and other technical reasons independent of BenchMark Finance.

9.16 In the servers of MetaTrader 4/5, respectively in the offered trading platforms MetaTrader 4/5, with which BenchMark Finance operates, the deviation function is not used in case of discrepancy between the buy or sell price of the financial instrument at the moment of receiving the order and the respective price. the financial instrument at the time of execution of the order.

9.17 BenchMark Finance strives to execute customer orders as quickly as possible after their entry into the servers of the MetaTrader 4/5 platform, but nevertheless during low liquidity Client execution policy for financial instrument transactions 14 and / or high volatility and / or depending on the type of financial instrument and / or the current server load and the flow of orders arriving at the same time, the execution time of client orders in the servers may vary and the investment intermediary may not be able to maintain the same speed and / or liquidity / probability of execution as usual. Such market conditions cannot be foreseen and can occur at any time of the day, which will lead to an extension of the execution time of orders for an indefinite period of time. It should be borne in mind that delays in the execution of customer orders may have a negative effect on the balance of customer trading accounts, which may lead to a shortage of funds and the closure of positions.

9.18 Clients should be aware that when they submit orders and / or their orders enter the BenchMark Finance system / the servers of the MetaTrader 4/5 platform and / or their orders are executed in the last minutes of the business hours of the Friday trading session or before a holiday day off, in the first minutes after the market opens on Monday or after national holidays, in the minutes around midnight when a swap is charged on the positions, these periods are characterized by low liquidity and slowly renewing quotes, therefore the execution time increases compared to the time for which customer orders are usually executed during the rest of the time (several hours earlier, for example).

9.19 In case BenchMark Finance starts offering to its clients and quoting prices for certain financial instruments during extended working hours, outside the working hours of the respective trading session where the underlying asset is traded, BenchMark Finance will inform its clients in advance about the conditions under which it provides extended working hours trading, the risks associated with this and will draw up a list on its website of those instruments for which it offers trading on the relevant extended working hours.

9.20 Due to the specifics of the electronic trading platforms accessed via the Internet, technical malfunctions may occur both in the hardware and software products and systems used by BenchMark Finance and in the hardware and software products used by the customer. Communication failures may also occur, leading to delays or non-arrival of orders, or to execution, respectively non-execution of already submitted orders, as well as to inability to access the trading platforms and others.

9.21 BenchMark Finance seeks to quote the spread levels indicated on the intermediary's website, however, during low liquidity and / or high volatility, the investment firm may not be able to maintain the same spread levels that it normally quotes. Such market conditions cannot be foreseen and can occur at any time of the day, which will lead to widening spreads over a period of time. It should be borne in mind that wider spreads may have a negative effect on the balance of clients' trading accounts, which may lead to a shortage of funds and the closure of positions.

9.22 BenchMark Finance has the right, in its sole discretion, to suspend trading or add new financial instruments to trading platforms by notifying customers in advance. In the event of suspension of trading of a financial instrument, BenchMark Finance has the right to close all existing customer positions at prices at the time of closing. Notifications for suspension of trading in certain instruments or the addition of new trading instruments may be made by means of a message on the trading platform, an email, a telephone call to the email address and / or telephone number provided by the client, or via news uploaded on the BenchMark Finance website.

9.23 The client's position in contracts for differences (CFDs) - CFDs on stocks, CFDs on commodities, CFDs on currencies, CFDs on indices, CFDs on metals, CFDs on cryptocurrencies and other OTC derivative instruments may be officially closed:

9.23.1 When trading in a underlying CFD asset is discontinued at at least one place of performance where it is traded;

9.23.2 When the relevant execution venue prohibits the underlying asset for trading, and in connection with this prohibition an additional requirement arises to close all positions on that asset, BenchMark Finance has the right to close the client's positions in CFD on this asset, with all current gains and losses being credited to the customer's account.

9.23.3 For positions in CFDs on shares, in cases of emergencies concerning and in relation to the company on whose shares the CFD instrument is based, such as:

- a) The company falls into insolvency or is declared bankrupt.
- b) Offers for acquisition, merger or amalgamation have been made with regard to the company or during the duration of the client's position in the CFD a transaction has been made for acquisition, merger or amalgamation of the company-issuer of the shares on which the CFD is based.
- c) The company issuing the shares has publicly announced information about a split of the shares or consolidation of the par value of the shares (reverse split).
- d) The company has announced a decision or intention to freely transfer or distribute an additional number of shares in the name of current shareholders in the form of a bonus due to an increase in capital with realized profit or the issuance of a new issue, which is distributed only among shareholders.
- e) The Company has announced a decision to transfer or issue in the name of the existing shareholders of securities entitling to receive a guaranteed dividend or liquidation quota, additional or new rights, warrants or entitlement to transfer, purchase, subscribe or receive shares at a price lower than the market.
- f) Any event similar to the above, leading to a change in the number of shares, issuance of new shares or special rights, split / division of shares in the capital, change in free float of shares or an event with a concentrating effect on the market capitalization of securities of the company whose capital is the underlying asset of the CFD.

When the underlying assets of an issue become subject to any of the events mentioned above and in case the client has open positions in CFDs based on them, BenchMark Finance reflects this change in accordance with the market rules of the respective market and the tax legislation of the country where the underlying assets are traded. This change will be considered effective on the date set by BenchMark Finance. However, in each of the above situations, BenchMark Finance has the right to close the CFD positions issued on the client's account, based on shares of the issuing company, by setting a closing date and price at its discretion.

9.23.4 In case of CFD positions on maturing futures contracts, in case the client does not close its positions before the maturity of the futures, BenchMark Finance officially closes the client's positions at the prices available at the time of closing and cancels all submitted orders related to trading with this CFD with underlying asset maturing futures.

9.23.5 In case of introduction of restrictions on the positions of clients (limits), when at the discretion of BenchMark Finance limits of the positions of the client/s are set in order to limit the risk for the clients or for BenchMark Finance or to limit the amount of the margin (guarantee amount), BenchMark Finance may require clients to limit the number of open positions in certain instruments and in case the client does not comply with this requirement, BenchMark Finance may at its discretion close one or more positions of the client.

9.23.6 In the event of a dispute regarding actions taken pursuant to this agreement, BenchMark Finance has the right to close part or all of the client's open positions, to reduce the size of the client's open positions, not to execute an order already placed, and not to accept an order opening new positions until the dispute is resolved.

9.23.7 In case of shortage of free funds securing the client's positions in the cases under item 9.29 of this policy. In case the available funds on the client's account are insufficient to secure the margin (guarantee amount) determined by BenchMark Finance on its website for the client's open positions, BenchMark Finance may, at its discretion, officially close one, several or all open positions of the client immediately without notice.

9.23.8 In case of non-compliance by the client with a margin call and / or if the client opens a position, as a result of which the margin (guarantee amount) on his account becomes insufficient to secure his positions, BenchMark Finance may at its discretion close one, several or all open positions of the client immediately without notice.

9.23.8 In the event of another situation, explicitly specified in the contract or the General Terms and Conditions of BenchMark Finance.

9.24 In the event that during the duration of an open position in a CFD, trading in the futures, stocks or indices on which the CFD is based is restricted or prohibited for a certain period of time or completely prohibited, the value of the client's position is estimated at the time before of this restriction or prohibition. BenchMark Finance reserves the right at any time during the period of restriction or prohibition to change the value of the CFD at its sole discretion, doing so in good faith and in accordance with prevailing market ratios. If this restriction or prohibition lasts more than 1 (one) business day, BenchMark Finance has the right to close the respective CFD by setting a price and closing date.

9.25 When trading CFDs on cryptocurrencies, customers should be aware and keep in mind that in the case of cryptocurrency, which is the underlying asset for a CFD offered by BenchMark Finance, the so-called fork may occur. A fork is a change in the cryptocurrency protocol in which the blockchain is divided into two or more parts. In this case, the clients of BenchMark Finance should be familiar with and take into account the following circumstances:

a) BenchMark Finance is not obliged to notify its customers in the event of an expected occurrence and / or incidental occurrence of a fork.

b) In the event of a cryptocurrency fork, BenchMark Finance may suspend trading in the relevant CFDs on cryptocurrencies indefinitely.

c) BenchMark Finance explicitly points out that in the case of a cryptocurrency fork, the market of the respective cryptocurrency, respectively the CFD market on this currency, can become highly volatile. Fork on a particular currency can affect and cause high volatility in the market of other cryptocurrencies.

d) In the event of a fork in which none of the branched blockchains has yet been terminated, BenchMark Finance will base the CFD on the relevant cryptocurrency on the chain with which the majority of users agree, with BenchMark Finance retaining the right to determine the chain with which the majority agrees. users and on which it will offer CFDs.

e) In the event of a fork in which the two chains continue to coexist as separate cryptocurrencies, BenchMark Finance is not obliged to offer CFDs on the new cryptocurrency, nor does it undertake in any way to debit or credit customers' accounts with CFDs on newly created ones. cryptocurrencies or with their respective cache equivalent in another currency.

9.26 Trading CFDs on stocks, CFDs on commodities, CFDs on currencies, CFDs on indices, CFDs on metals, CFDs on cryptocurrencies and other OTC derivatives is carried out against a guarantee amount or it is "margin trading". This type of trading uses the so-called "leverage", which is a "lever" mechanism and multiplies both profits and losses as relatively small market movements can have a large effect on customer positions. Trading in these financial instruments provides the opportunity and allows investment in leverage, whereby BenchMark Finance, in compliance with regulatory requirements and market practices, requires its customers to provide a guarantee for possible losses. As a result, the deposited funds representing a guarantee ("margin") on open positions may be completely exhausted. The margin / guarantee amount provided by the client, which secures his positions and is in his trading account, is measured as a percentage of the transaction value.

Example 1: If for a given instrument the required margin rate is 10% and the client opens a position for USD 20,000, then the blocked margin (guarantee amount) for the open position will be USD 2,000. Although the blocked margin of the client is only USD 2,000, his exposure is the same as it would be if the instrument were not traded on a margin, ie USD 20,000.

Example 2: If a client opens a position of 2000 CFDs on a share, with an initial margin rate of 20% and a base share price of USD 5, the amount to be blocked on the client's account will be $USD\ 5 \times 2000 \times 20\% = USD\ 2000$. The leverage effect, in this case 1/20% (1:5), will result in a notional contract value of $USD\ 5 \times 2000 = USD\ 10,000$. This means that for every cent a change in price (a change in price from USD 0.01) of the base share, the value of the CFD changes by USD 20. For example, if the client has a long position and the price of the base share increases by one cent (0.01), then he will make a profit of USD 20. However, if the price of the base share decreases by one cent (0.01), then the client will realize a loss of USD 20.

The amount of the guarantee amount / margin, expressed as a percentage, for the different types of instruments is indicated on the website of BenchMark Finance. In determining the amount of the guarantee amount both for the client and for the financial instrument, BenchMark Finance complies with the requirements set by the Financial Supervision Client execution policy for financial instrument transactions 18 Commission (FSC), the European Securities and Markets Authority (ESMA) and / or or by the supervisory authorities of other Member States of the European Union, if any.

9.27 In case of change of the regulatory requirements and / or in case of setting new requirements by FSC, ESMA and / or supervisory authorities of other Member States of the European Union, BenchMark Finance changes the amount of the minimum required guarantee amount, both for certain financial instruments and for individual customers. In this case, BenchMark Finance immediately notifies the client by sending a message to the e-mail address provided by the client and / or contacts him by phone at the contact telephone number provided by the client and / or sends a message to the trading platform itself and reflects the change in the electronic trading platform.

9.28 BenchMark Finance may, at its sole discretion, change the amount of the minimum required guarantee amount, both for certain financial instruments and for individual orders and / or positions or accounts of the client in the following cases:

a) in case of large and sharp fluctuations in the market of these financial instruments or of the underlying instruments for the respective CFD;

- b) in the event of important economic and / or political events;
- b) other circumstances affecting trading in those financial instruments;
- c) when the total amount of the balances on the client's account / accounts and the positions opened by him exceeds the limits acceptable for BenchMark Finance;
- d) in case of need to protect the rights of BenchMark Finance under the contract.

In case of such a change, BenchMark Finance immediately notifies the client by sending a message to the e-mail address provided by the client and / or notifies him by phone on the contact telephone number provided by the client or in the trading platform itself and reflects the change in the electronic trading platform.

9.29 When trading on a margin, the client must monitor the amount of his current balance and free cash in his trading account. When the client accumulates losses from open positions or has opened too many or in a large volume of positions, the free funds on the account decrease and at some point it is possible that the account does not have the necessary cash guarantee to maintain open positions. The shortage of the current balance (free funds) may lead to official closing of positions, whereby BenchMark Finance may close partially or completely all positions opened by the client at prices determined by BenchMark Finance.

Up-to-date information on the level of utilized margin, the current balance and the amount of the free trading margin is available for each client in the "Trading" module in the platform used by him and / or the client can receive at any time by phone by contacting BenchMark Finance the telephone numbers listed on the intermediary's website.

In all cases of official partial or complete closure of the positions opened by the client, the client cannot contest the price levels of the transactions for closing his positions by BenchMark Finance.

9.30 BenchMark Finance reserves the right, in its sole discretion or to protect the client's interests, to set limits, limit the amount of the margin (guarantee amount) and / or take other measures it deems appropriate to control the client's ability to trades, such as setting maximum size and price of orders, determining the maximum amount of the total exposure of a client, control over orders submitted at a price that differs significantly from the prevailing market price, as well as any other measures.

BenchMark Finance may take the measures under the previous sentence and in cases where this is required by the requirements of applicable law, decisions of the FSC, ESMA and / or supervisory authorities of other Member States of the European Union.

Such limits or other measures may be amended, added or removed without prior notice to the customer, except when imposing limits on the amount of the margin (guarantee amount) when BenchMark Finance notifies the customer in the manner described above.

10.8 BenchMark Finance provides the client with a signed copy of the accepted order, when the order is submitted and accepted at the office of the investment intermediary. The orders, submitted in the electronic platforms, are kept in the platform itself, the confirmations for their execution are received by the client automatically in the platform immediately with the execution of the client's order.

10.9 According to the regulations, BenchMark Finance has no right to execute and does not execute a client's order, if it finds that the financial instruments - subject of the sale order, are not available on the client's account, except when this is legally permissible for certain cases (e.g. short sales), or are blocked in a depository institution, as well as if a pledge has been established or a lien has been imposed on them, or the transaction - subject of the order, represents a covert purchase or sale of financial instruments/compensatory instruments.

BenchMark Finance may execute an order, upon submission of which it subsequently establishes that the financial instruments subject to the sale order are not available on the client's account, when BenchMark Finance otherwise ensures that the financial instruments subject to sale will be delivered on the settlement date of the transaction.

BenchMark Finance will execute an order in respect of financial instruments that are pledged when the acquirer is notified of the pledge and has explicitly agreed to acquire the pledged financial instruments and there is the explicit consent of the pledgee in the Special Pledges Act (SPA). cases, or if the pledge is established on a set within the meaning of the SPA.

10.10 BenchMark Finance may refuse to execute a client's order, if the client declares or the intermediary subsequently finds that the client has inside information about the financial Client execution policy for financial instrument transactions 21 instruments to which the order relates or about their issuer, if the financial instruments are traded on a regulated market.

When submitting an order, in case of the financial instrument is traded on a trading venue, the client must declare if:

- a) The financial instruments/compensatory instruments - subject of the order for sale/exchange, are/are not blocked in the depository institution where they are kept, a pledge has been/has not been established on them, a/has not been seized.
- b) Has/does not have inside information about the financial instruments to which the order relates and about their issuer, if the financial instruments are traded on a regulated market.
- c) The deal- subject of the order, does not represent/represents a covert purchase or sale of financial instruments/compensatory instruments.

The refusal to submit a declaration is certified by a signature of the client when the order is submitted on paper.

10.11 BenchMark Finance requires a client, who submits an order to purchase financial instruments, to provide it with the funds necessary to pay for the transaction - subject of the order, when submitting the order, unless the client certifies that he will fulfill his obligation to pay. If the rules of the place of execution, where the deal will be executed, allow the deal execution, in which the payment of financial instruments is not made simultaneously with their transfer, the investment intermediary may not require payment from the buyer with the express written consent of the seller. This applies accordingly to other transfer transactions with financial instruments.

10.12 At the moment of submitting the written orders, respectively immediately after receiving the orders submitted remotely, they are registered in the system of BenchMark Finance, assigning them a unique serial number. Orders, submitted through an electronic trading platform, are automatically registered in the BenchMark Finance system. The orders are executed in accordance with the provisions of the specific contract, this Policy, the General Terms and Conditions of BenchMark Finance, applicable to the contracts with clients and the rules for trading on the respective market. Execution is performed in the order of registration of orders in the system of BenchMark Finance, except when the characteristics of the order or the prevailing market conditions make this impossible, or the interests of the client, according to this Policy, require otherwise.

10.13 BenchMark Finance informs the non-professional client about any significant difficulty, related to the correct execution of the orders, immediately after learning of the difficulty.

10.14 BenchMark Finance enters the orders for transactions with financial instruments for its own account in the manner and order for client orders. In this way, BenchMark Finance pursues an effective policy to prevent conflicts of interest with its clients.

10.15 When two or more orders to sell or exchange of financial instruments are identical in their parameters and for any of them the check for the availability of financial instruments is delayed for reasons outside BenchMark Finance (for example for financial instruments with a trustee), BenchMark Finance will not consider such an order to be identical to the others and Client execution policy for financial instrument transactions 22 will execute them, in the order of their submission and validation, even if these orders are submitted later in time.

11. Grouping (merging) of orders

11.1 BenchMark Finance executes customer orders and orders for its own account individually. In certain cases, BenchMark Finance may combine client orders and those for its own account with other client orders, provided that:

- a) the aggregation of orders and transactions will not be to the detriment of any of the clients, whose orders are merged;
- b) it is made known to all customers, whose orders are combined, that the merger may have consequences, which are detrimental to the particular order, and
- c) the order allocation policy set out below is established and effectively implemented.

11.2. In the event that upon entering the place for execution of a joint order, the counteroffer is changed and the combined offer is executed in several parts and at different prices or even partially executed, the previously submitted individual client order shall have priority

11.3 BenchMark Finance will not distribute the concluded transactions in execution of a joint order in a way that is to the detriment of the clients.

11.4 BenchMark Finance combines its orders with client orders in order to minimize administrative costs and time, when the initial subscription of shares, or the admission to trading of financial instruments on the spot for execution for the first time, the allocation procedure in case of re-subscription provides for proportionality, for all investors.

11.5 BenchMark Finance has the right to combine its own and client's orders, in the cases when it will be able to prove reasonably and indisputably that without the merger it would not be able to execute the client's order under such favorable conditions for him, or that it would not be able to fulfill. In this case, BenchMark Finance can distribute the concluded transaction proportionally between itself and the client.

11.6 Except for the cases under the previous two points, when BenchMark Finance has combined a client order with a transaction for its own account and thus the combined order is partially executed, the investment intermediary will distribute the transactions for the client's account with priority. BenchMark Finance has no right to redistribute transactions for its own account, executed jointly with client orders, when this is to the detriment of the client.

11.7 BenchMark Finance may combine orders for transactions with financial assets, which are submitted on behalf and for the account of portfolios of clients, which it manages. Such consolidated order is treated as an individual client order and is executed, respectively combined with other client orders and orders for own account of BenchMark Finance according to this Policy, and in its partial execution the financial assets are always distributed proportionally in order to ensure equality of clients, whose portfolios BenchMark Finance manages.

11.8 BenchMark Finance does not execute an order of a client or a transaction for its own account combined with an order of another client when it comes to orders for trading in CFDs on the OTC market, as in this case BenchMark Finance is the only place to execute orders and is the counterparty to each transaction. In view of this, the Policy does not contain rules concerning the preservation of the client's interest in the cases of merging (grouping) and distribution of orders for trading in CFDs on the MetaTrader 4/5 platforms.

11.9 When the investment intermediary charges receivables from two or more participants in a transaction in accordance with Article 24 (9) of Directive 2014/65 / EU and its implementing measures, the investment intermediary informs its clients of the value of all monetary and non-monetary benefits, received by the intermediary.

BenchMark Finance acts as a counterparty to the transactions of clients with OTC derivatives, contracts for differences (CFD) on the OTC market, therefore BenchMark Finance does not accrue receivables from two or more participants in a transaction in accordance with Art. 24 (9) of MiFID II does not receive non-monetary benefits as an intermediary and the value of all monetary benefits that it receives as an intermediary are specified in the BenchMark Finance Tariff of Fees and Commissions.

12. Cases where the best execution policy has a limited position

12.1 Specific instructions

12.1.1 A Client may request from BenchMark Finance to execute his order in accordance with specific instructions - both in full and separately. BenchMark Finance will follow the client's instructions as much as possible. However:

- When the specific instructions of the client lead to higher implementation costs, BenchMark Finance will pay these additional costs by charging them as fees to the client. In this case, BenchMark Finance will notify the client of the changed fees before accepting the execution order.
- When the specific instructions of the client are in conflict with the normal work processes, BenchMark Finance will give priority to the specific instructions. This can lead to a different result when executing the customer's order.
- When there is no conflict, BenchMark Finance will continue to follow this implementation policy.

12.1.2 In the case of specific instructions from the client (eg indication of the place of execution of the order), BenchMark Finance respects its obligation for best execution to the client's order and to take all sufficient steps to obtain the best possible result for the client, following exactly the client's instructions and executing the client's order in accordance with them. This Policy is not applicable to performance factors, specified by the customer and BenchMark Finance will execute customer orders in accordance with the instructions submitted by the customer and the customer acts at his own risk and responsibility for the performance factors specified by him. For factors for which no instructions have been submitted by the client, BenchMark Finance will apply this Policy.

The client should keep in mind that the special instructions submitted by him may prevent BenchMark Finance from taking the necessary actions to achieve the best result in the execution of client orders in accordance with the current order execution policy for this part of the order to which the instructions refer.

12.2 Stop-out closure

12.2.1 In the event of an official closing of positions, BenchMark Finance seeks to immediately close, terminate or cancel all or part of the client's positions. BenchMark Finance has the discretion and personal judgment on how to perform automatic closing of positions in order to release additional margin and reach the margin requirement levels, including personal judgment regarding the execution of the order, the amount of instruments, aggregation, the determination of the priority of the positions (in what order to be closed) and at what prices to perform the closing of the client's positions.

12.2.2 In case of official closing of positions and/or sale of financial instruments to the client in order to cover a negative cash balance on one or more accounts of the client, accumulated as a result of transactions, concluded by the client or provided investment or additional services under Art. 6 of Financial Instruments Markets Act. In cases of official closing of positions, the client unconditionally agrees with the price levels at which BenchMark Finance has closed its positions and the closing of the client's positions in financial instruments is carried out at the discretion of BenchMark Finance at current market prices and in compliance with the current policy.

12.3 Execution at a highly volatile market, which leads to a number of risks associated with performance in a volatile market. Clients should be aware of the following risks, associated with market volatility, especially in the vicinity of the opening or closing of a standard trading session.

12.3.1 Execution of the order at a significantly different price from the quotation of the offer or from the last reported (quoted) price at the time of acceptance of the order or the price visible from the client (quotation), as well as partial execution or execution of large orders in several transactions at different prices.

12.3.2 The prices at the opening of the market may differ significantly from the prices at which the market closed during the previous session.

12.3.3 The opening price coincides with the closing price or falls into a “gap” in the case of a closed market. In this case, when the market is opened, the client orders will be executed at the first possible market price, which is unpredictable, as there may be a significant widening of the spreads, compared to the usual and when submitting market, limit, stop or other types of orders to be concluded at prices, significantly different from those, set by the client.”

12.3.4 Market volatility is one of the factors that can lead to the execution of an order. When there is a large volume of orders on the market, imbalances can occur, as well as delays in execution. This means that more time is needed to execute pending orders. Such delays are usually due to the excessive number and size of orders to be processed, the speed, with which current quotations are provided (or information on the last price, when selling instruments), the limitations related to the technical capacity of the systems, the Internet Client execution policy for financial instrument transactions 25 connection or devices, used by the customer or applicable to a trading venue or an execution venue, as well as those of BenchMark Finance and other financial institutions.

12.4 Use and transmission of information

BenchMark Finance may access and use and/or provide its counterparties with information about customer orders, positions, trade and other data analyzes in the form of general anonymous and aggregated data. This anonymous and aggregated data can be used for market information, analytical materials, risk management strategies, creating a target market for products and services, providing liquidity and other products and services of BenchMark Finance. The nature of the anonymous and aggregated data provided may differ from that provided to other counterparties in terms of quantity, scope, methodology or otherwise and may be changed without notice to customers.

12.5 With regard to prices

When trading over-the-counter derivatives on the OTC market, offered by BenchMark Finance, clients trade at a price, quoted by BenchMark Finance. There are a number of factors that can be used to construct a derivative price and they vary, depending on the asset class traded, the nature of the market, the characteristics and terms of the transaction and any particular market or credit risks. BenchMark Finance applies a standard method for determining the price/quotation of the offered derivatives to ensure that the price/quotation at any time is always considered to be a fair and best price that the client can receive.

II. RELATED RISKS WITH PRODUCTS THAT ARE ISSUED BY OTHER PARTIES AND OFFERED BY BENCHMARK FINANCE

1. Products issued by other parties and offered by BenchMark Finance.

(Amended by a decision of the Board of Directors dated 29.11.2021) The products offered by BenchMark Finance, which are created by other persons are: shares, debt instruments - bonds and money market instruments, government securities, exchange traded products - exchange traded funds, exchange-traded bonds and exchange-traded commodities (ETF, ETN, ETC), depository receipts, rights, warrants, compensatory notes and vouchers, indices and other instruments and products admitted to trading on the regulated market and multilateral systems organized by the Bulgarian Stock Exchange AD. trade - SME (small and medium enterprises) Beam and MTF BSE International Growth Market. BenchMark Finance executes orders for transactions with these products mainly on the respective regulated market or MTF on which they are admitted to trading and exceptionally on a non-regulated market. When executing the orders, BenchMark Finance complies with the Policy for Execution of Client Orders for Transactions with Financial Instruments of BenchMark Finance.

2. Risks for trading products that are issued by other parties.

2.1 Price risk

In trading with the aforementioned products, clients are exposed to price risk, which is associated with the risk of realization of losses resulting from financial instruments price changes. Price changes may arise from the fundamental status of the respective issuer (issuer) of these financial instruments (present and expected results of operational activities, net asset value, goodwill, realization of investment intentions, etc.) and from the economic and market conditions in Bulgaria and to varying degrees from the market and economic conditions in other Central and Eastern European countries as well as in the other emerging markets at all.

The market value of financial instruments is determined on the basis of supply and demand and their price may increase or decrease. These "fluctuations" in prices can cause a financial instrument to cost a lot less than at a certain point in the past. Exchange rates for financial instruments may be subject to sharp fluctuations as a result of public disclosure of the issuer's financial performance, changes in the issuer's environment, changes in legislation, and other material events, including factors external to the issuer.

2.2 Liquidity risk

When trading with the aforementioned products, clients are exposed to liquidity risk that is related to the low availability or lack of market demand. This risk expresses the potential inability for buying or selling for short periods of time. The low liquidity, and in particular the lack of active market demand, makes it difficult to enter into transactions.

The emergence of liquidity risk, in relation to trading in financial instruments, has in general been associated with the lack of sufficiently well-developed demand for these instruments over a given period(s), or the difficulty of selling or buying them to prevent loss or the realization of profits. Investors should keep in mind that the BSE (Bulgarian Stock Exchange) is significantly smaller and less liquid than the exchanges in countries with developed market economies. Liquidity on financial instruments is determined by:

- The presence of sufficiently interested sellers and buyers on the relevant securities market;
- The presence of a sufficient number of relevant securities in circulation;
- The existence of an acceptable spread (spread) between the "buy" and "sell" prices of the relevant securities.

The investors in financial instruments whose investment horizon is shorter than the life of the securities may fail to complete all or part of their investment at the desired moment and to force the sale/ purchase of financial instruments at a significantly less favorable price in comparison to their current fair value or the latest market price. This may lead to inability to be realized capital gains or to the impossibility of preventing investors from losing money.

2.3 Inflation risk

When trading the aforementioned products, clients are also exposed to inflation risk. Inflation risk is associated with the risk that the realized return on investment in the respective financial instrument is less than or equal to the inflation recorded for the respective period. The inflation processes in general lead to a reduction in the real yield that investors receive. Although in the long run the return on investments in different financial instruments in Bulgaria and other developed market economies has significantly outpaced recorded inflation, there is no guarantee for investors that this trend will continue in the future and that investments in the relevant financial instruments would represent a real protection against inflation.

2.4 Currency risk

When trading the aforementioned products, clients are exposed to currency risk, when their funds are in a currency other than BGN and EUR due to the exchange rate movements. Investors who take such a currency risk on a purchase would increase or reduce the effective return on their investment as a consequence of strengthening or weakening the exchange rate of the BGN/EUR against the respective currency in which the investor's funds are denominated.

If financial instruments are denominated in BGN or EUR, the existence and maintenance of the current BGN/EUR exchange rate system determines the lack of currency risk for investors whose initial funds are in the same currencies.

In particular, the currency risk associated with investing in financial instruments issued by Bulgarian issuers is related to their denominations in BGN. The unfavorable change in the exchange rate of the BGN versus other currencies would change the yield that foreign investors outside the Eurozone expect to receive by comparing it with the return they would receive from such an investment in the respective currency. This may lead to a reduced demand and, accordingly, a fall in the prices of certain financial instruments.

The currency risk of the investment could be reduced by using currency instruments to minimize it (hedging). Stability and high confidence in the credibility of the currency board in the country, as well as the prevailing positions of the euro on international currency markets, restrict to a certain extent the existence of currency risk.

Any investor who trades securities on financial markets outside the Eurozone may be exposed to significant currency risk.

2.5 Settlement risk

When trading with the aforementioned products, clients are exposed to settlement risk. The settlement risk is represented by the risk of delay or non-fulfillment of a counterparty's obligation to transfer funds or financial instruments in relation to a concluded transaction in the event of which the investor may realize a loss, miss out a profit or become incapable of fulfilling other subsequent commitments for the supply of cash or financial assets.

2.6 Reinvestment risk

When trading financial instruments, clients are exposed to a risk of reinvestment, which occurs when there is a reinvestment of the cash flows from an investment at a lower yield investment, resulting in a reduction in the investor's return. Such a circumstance exists if an investor decides to exit her investment in a financial instrument and invests the funds in another financial instrument which subsequently brings her a lower return than the one realized in the original investment.

2.7 Specific stock trading risks

In stock trading clients are exposed to additional risks that are associated with the specifics of this type of financial instrument. Stocks are major financial instruments proving ownership over the capital of public companies. Clients who have purchased stocks acquire both proprietary rights (e.g. dividend right) and non-material rights (voting rights, right to participate in the management, right to information, etc.). In stock trading a specific risk is the risk of changes in the intentions of the main shareholder of the capital. Depending on the size of the capital held by the principal shareholder, the principal shareholder can exercise a decisive influence on a number of issues requiring a decision of the General Meeting of Shareholders, such as changes in the Articles of Association, appointment and dismissal of the members of the management bodies, approval of significant transactions, distribution of dividends, etc. For stock investors, there is a risk of any changes in the intentions of the main shareholder, which could have a negative impact on the company's activities as well as on the interests of the minority shareholders.

A specific risk for equity investors is uncertainty connected with dividend receiving, volatility in the amount of the dividend and, in particular, its non-payment. The ability of the company to pay dividends Description of the offered products and related risks 4 is related to the realization of a positive financial result on the one hand and the decision on its distribution among the shareholders. The financial result of the company depends on a number of factors, including the skills and professionalism of the management team, the development of the market in which the company operates, the economic development of the country and the region, etc.

There are other risks, which is why customers intending to invest in a company's shares should make themselves aware of all the risks inherent in the investment from the relevant information materials (prospectus) before making their investment decision.

2.8 Specific risks related to trading bonds

In bond trading, clients are also exposed to risks that are associated with the specific characteristics of this financial instrument. Bonds are debt securities, certifying the financial obligation of the issuer about their repayment on certain dates and payment in the form of interest or a subtraction from the issuance par. Interest rate risk is the risk of an unfavorable change in the redemption price due to the further change.

In bond trading, investors are also exposed to risks associated with the risk of default of the issuer. This possibility is related to both the financial results of the issuer (cost effectiveness, investments, operational efficiency, activity supervision, etc.), as well as the external factors (market environment, regulatory framework). The impact of this risk is directly related to the size of the current indebtedness of the issuer of the securities.

In bond trading, clients should also take into account the potential prepayment risk that exists when a pre-maturity buyback option is provided for that bond issue and that option is exercised. In this scenario the investor cannot achieve his/her initial investment intentions and is not able to realize the expected return on the investment.

In bond trading, clients should also take into account the potential risk of conversion. That risk occurs when there is an option for this bond issue to be converted into shares by the initiative of the issuer before or at the maturity date. As a result of the conversion, the investor acquires another financial instrument instead of the expected cash, and thus the investor cannot achieve his/her initial investment intention.

There are other specific risks for bond investors, so clients who intend to invest in a company's bonds should be aware of the risks associated with this investment (from relevant information materials), before making their investment decision.

2.9 Specific risks related to trading shares of UCITS (also known as collective investment schemes or mutual funds) and ETF (Exchange traded funds)

Clients who invest in shares of UCITS and ETF are exposed to additional risks which are specific for this class of financial instruments. Investing in shares of UCITS and an ETF is related to risks, which are directly dependent on the investment strategy of the fund. The investment policy of the fund is important e.g. what assets its policy is targeted at - equities, debt securities, indices or other more risky instruments - and whether management of the fund is active or passive. The risk profile of the respective UCITS and ETF contains a summary of the risk.

In regard to UCITS, there is a specific manifestation of the liquidity risk arising from the risk of temporarily suspending the redemption of the units of the UCITS under certain conditions. Respectively, in regards to ETFs there is also an additional specific counterparty risk related to the failure of the market maker(s) to meet the redemption requests.

In regard to UCITS/ETF, there is a specific manifestation of price risk, expressed as a price change in the UCITS/ETF shares, as a result of a negative change in the net asset valuation. There is no guarantee that investors will realize returns from the UCITS/ETF and that the initial investment will be preserved.

A specific risk for investments in UCITS/ETF is the credit risk associated with the risk that the fund may not meet its obligations to creditors and to investors who have submitted their redemptions.

Another specific risk related to investing in UCITS/ETF shares is the operational risk associated with the risk of breaches in the normal functioning of the respective UCITS/ETF.

When investing in UCITS/ETF units, customers should acquaint themselves with the prospectus of each UCITS/ETF before making their investment decision.

2.10 Specific risks related to compensatory instruments

In trading with compensatory instruments customers are exposed, in addition to the general price and liquidity risk described above, to additional risks according to the characteristics of the compensatory instruments. Compensatory instruments are dematerialized registered payment instruments that serve to compensate persons whose properties, buildings or agricultural lands are nationalized or expropriated. Compensatory instruments are compensatory records and housing compensatory records under the Compensation Act for Owners of Nationalized Property, as well as the nominal compensation bills under the Ownership and Use of Agricultural Land Act and the Restitution of Ownership Act on Forests and Lands from the Forestry Fund. A specific risk in trading with this type of financial instrument is the target risk, which is characterized by the limitation of target use and investment of this type of financial instruments only in specific projects and transactions as a means of payment accepted by the state, such as the payment of interest on law for settlement of lost loans, in tenders for agricultural land from the State Land Fund or payments for privatization transactions through the BSE - Sofia.

2.11 Risks related to the Bulgarian securities market

Investors in emerging markets, such as the Bulgarian one, should be aware that these markets are at greater risk than those in more developed markets. Moreover, the unfavorable political or economic development in other countries in the region could have a significant negative impact on Bulgaria's GDP, its foreign trade and the economy as a whole. Investors should pay particular attention to the valuation of existing risks and should make their own decision whether, in the presence of such risks, the investment in the relevant financial instruments of the BSE is appropriate for them.

Investing in emerging markets is suited to experienced investors who fully appreciate the relevance of the relevant risks.

Investors may have fewer information on the Bulgarian securities market than is available to companies in other securities markets. There is some difference in the regulation and supervision of the Bulgarian securities market and in the actions of investors and other market participants compared to the developed markets in Western Europe and the USA.

2.12 Specific risk when using electronic platforms for trading

(Amended by the decision of the Board of Directors of 29.11.2021, amended by the decision of the Board of Directors of 27.01.2022) Due to the specifics of the electronic platforms for trading (such as the electronic trading platform BG Trader), access to which is carried out via the Internet may technically arise malfunctions, both in those used by BenchMark Finance and in those used by customer hardware and software products and access systems or devices. Some communication failures may occur, leading to delays or non-arrival of orders, or until execution, respectively non-execution of already submitted orders, as well as the inability to access the trading platform and others.

If a customer is unable to access the trading platform for any reason, he will not be able to trade in the relevant financial instrument at that moment, due to which he may suffer a loss. There is a risk in extremely rare cases in unforeseen market situations BenchMark Finance to impose restrictions on the volume of transactions or filter trades, enter pre-set trading thresholds, credit limits, suspend or delay the execution of customer orders or take other restrictive measures.

3. Trading costs

All fees and commissions for trading products, issued by other persons and offered by BenchMark Finance, are detailed in the broker's tariff published on www.benchmarkfx.co.uk

III. PRODUCTS ISSUED AND PROVIDED BY BENCHMARK FINANCE. RELATED RISKS.

1. Products issued by BenchMark Finance

The products issued and offered by BenchMark Finance are complex financial instruments, so the client needs to get acquainted with this document before deciding whether to trade. The financial instruments which BenchMark Finance issues are CFDs that are based on spot currencies, stocks, indices, commodities or cryptocurrencies.

It is recommended to potential investors to have experience in derivative trading, in particular derivatives traded on a non-regulated market, and to understand and accept that CFD trading on leverage is related to high risk.

2. Risk linked to leverage

2.1. Risk linked to leverage

Products offered for trading by BenchMark Finance are traded on leverage. In compliance with regulatory requirements and market practices BenchMark Finance JSC requires customers to provide a guarantee (margin) for possible losses and the amount of this guarantee is less than the full nominal value of the traded underlying instrument. When trading such derivatives the client must be prepared to bear a higher risk, which can lead to both large losses and large profits. The high leverage of these products can work both against the customer and for the benefit of the customer, which is why it is advisable for the client to have more free funds to cover margin trading requirements for a product.

The margin requirements applicable to the transactions may change rapidly and at any time in line with market movements as well as the prices of the relevant instrument.

2.2. Risk of unlimited losses

The potential losses resulting from long or short positions in the products offered by BenchMark Finance may exceed the amount initially paid by the client to cover the margin requirements for financial instruments issued by BenchMark Finance.

2.3. Margin risk

At any time, the client must have sufficient funds available to cover the required margin for the open positions. In the event of a shortage of available funds that cover the required guarantee amount on the open positions, BenchMark Finance may close (Stop out) one or more positions. The Customer must independently monitor the compliance with the required amount of guarantee in the BenchMark Finance platforms. The Minimum Margin Requirements are constantly changing in line with market movements as well as the relevant instrument.

There is a risk that marginal requirements may change for a very short period of time. In the event that the price of a traded instrument moves rapidly in the opposite direction to the client's position, the client will have to provide additional funds in order to keep the open positions.

In case the client does not meet the margin requirements BenchMark Finance will proceed to the closing of one, several or all open positions in the client's account.

Customers can reduce the risk of losing money, as a result of non-compliance with margin requirements, by carefully selecting the product for trading, observing open positions, and holding sufficient free funds to cover the minimum margin requirement

2.4. Currency risk

The customer's trading account may be denominated in euro or dollars. If a client requests a transaction to be executed in a currency other than the currency of his/her account, BenchMark Finance JSCo will make an exchange at the current exchange rate of the currency in which the trading account is opened.

The client should consider the currency of the relevant financial instruments he/she trades with, because any currency conversions in a currency other than the currency in which his/her trading account is denominated, can expose the client to currency risk.

For example, if the trading account is in EUR and the client has an open position in a CFD on US dollar- denominated gold, the denomination currency of this transaction will be US dollars. This means that while the client holds the gold position open, her account is both at risk of changes in the price of gold and the risk associated with US dollar movements against the euro. Once the client closes the position, the platform will recalculate the respective financial result of the transaction to the currency of the trading account according to the current EURUSD rate.

In addition, the conversion process may lead to an increase in the currency risk between the opening time of the transaction and the time it is closed. Foreign exchange markets can change very quickly and this puts the client's account at risk in cases of more serious currency fluctuations and may affect the outcome of trading with BenchMark Finance's product.

2.5. Risk related to the suspension or termination of underlying asset trading

When the trade with the main instrument is suspended, interrupted or discontinued, this will affect the trading with the derivative product offered by BenchMark Finance and it may also be temporarily suspended or discontinued. In these cases, BenchMark Finance will not be able to offer its clients the relevant derivative product and will not allow opening of new positions. In such a situation, customers who have already opened positions in this product may not be able to close them.

When the trade with main instrument is suspended or discontinued in respect of already open positions of customers, BenchMark Finance may take some or a combination of the following steps:

- Closing the open positions in the affected instrument or product;
- Increasing the margin requirement for the instrument or product up to 100%;
- Continued accrual of the respective positive or negative swap on open positions in this product or instrument (overnight interest rate);
- Charging of additional commissions or fees for retained, blocked, suspended, locked or closed positions in this product or instrument;
- Using the last price at which the instrument was traded to determine the margin requirement as well as the fees payable by the customer, or using another price when BenchMark Finance can reasonably believe that the price reasonably reflects the value of a given product of BenchMark Finance.

Any kind of interruptions, suspensions, or discontinuations of trading with some instrument may lead to potential losses, as this would prevent the customer from fulfilling the desired trading strategy.

2.6. Counterparty risk

BenchMark Finance is the customer's counterparty. Counterparty risk is the risk that the CFD issuer (i.e. your counterparty) does not meet or is unable to meet its financial obligations. If the client's funds are not properly separated from the CFD issuer's funds and the CFD issuer has financial difficulties, then there is a risk that the client will not be able to recover its funds and incur a loss. In the event that BenchMark Finance goes bankrupt, the assets of non-professional clients are guaranteed and compensated by the Investor Compensation Fund. The compensation paid by the Fund amounts to up to 90% of the value of the claim but not more than BGN 40,000.

2.7. Market risk

The products which are offered by BenchMark Finance, as well as the markets in which financial instruments are traded, are highly speculative and highly volatile. The market risk is the risk that the value of a client's investment will decrease. Financial markets are changing extremely rapidly, with prices of underlying instruments depending on a number of factors, such as business activity of issuers, corporate events, commodity prices or index levels, exchange rates, interest rates, supply and demand, central bank monetary policy, the economic and market environment, and the actions of state bodies or governments. Each exchange may terminate the offering of a given underlying instrument or cease the transmission of quotes.

The risk is inherent in both BenchMark Finance's products and their underlying instruments.

There is no guarantee that the client will make profits and that there will be no losses, and that unrealized gains or losses will remain unchanged.

There is a risk that if market prices move in an unfavorable direction for the client's positions, the client may close his positions at a significantly lower value than the one he invested, as he may lose all his invested capital.

Clients can reduce market risk by deepening their knowledge of relevant financial instruments and markets and carefully tracks their positions to prevent unacceptable losses

2.8. Unregulated market

The products offered by BenchMark Finance are derivatives traded on a non-regulated market (OTC derivatives) and are therefore not covered by the rules governing instruments traded on a regulated market. OTC derivatives need not always be liquid investments. If the client wishes to close an open position, this means that he or she relies on BenchMark Finance to be able to execute the order to close the position in real time (the moment the client wants to do so), which may, however, not correspond to liquidity or the market price of the underlying instrument at that time, i.e. the position may be closed or the customer's order executed at a price significantly different from the one indicated (including slippage) or it may not be possible for the position to be closed at the moment desired by the client.

2.9. Market shocks

Market shocks can affect a financial instrument and, accordingly, affect BenchMark Finance products. Often, such events result in trading interruptions, "blocking" of the quotation source (stock exchange, liquidity provider, etc.), reports from a regulatory authority announcing an emergency with a particular underlying instrument.

In the event of market shocks the client may not be able to close a position in a relevant instrument, which may result in loss or loss of profit. The reason for the trading interruption could be a failure of the e-commerce computer system or the trading of the financial instrument on a stock exchange or by a liquidity provider.

2.10. Gap risk

Market gap means a significant change in the prices of a financial instrument over a short period of time, sharp fluctuations in market quotations (gaps). In these cases there is a risk of delay or inability for clients to open or close positions in a product offered by BenchMark Finance.

BenchMark Finance's ability to close a position in a product depends on the market situation at that time. Stop Loss Orders (Loss Reduction Orders), if the customer has placed this type of order, it can be executed at a level different from the one previously set by the client and thus, even if Stop Loss orders are placed, they cannot limit losses to the amount specified in the order as they do not guarantee that the order execution will occur at the set Stop Loss level. In case of gap the order is executed at the first possible price after it, provided by BenchMark Finance. To do this, the client should give due consideration to placing Stop Loss or other orders that limit any losses, but in addition, he must carefully monitor his account, monitor the relevant instrument and/or market and in case his Stop Loss order is passed take further action to limit losses.

If the client has a Take Profit order and there is a market gap in the direction of the client's position, this Take Profit can be performed at a level better than the predefined level, higher than the expected earnings.

2.11. Online trading platform and IT risk

If a customer is unable to access BenchMark Finance's trading platforms for any reason, she will not be able to trade with the product in question (will not be able to close any open positions) or may not be aware of the margin requirements at that point, which can cause loss. BenchMark Finance has the discretion to suspend the operation of the offered platforms or any part of them without prior notice. This can be undertaken and usually occurs in extremely rare cases in unforeseen or extreme market situations. If BenchMark Finance platforms are discontinued, customers may have difficulty contacting BenchMark Finance or their orders may be executed at a price different from the one indicated in them.

There is a risk that BenchMark Finance may impose restrictions on the volume of transactions or filter the trade, which may halt or delay the execution of customer orders. In such market situations, the customer has no basis for claiming BenchMark Finance in connection with the availability or absence of trading platforms, nor for any errors in their software or other platform issues, including no basis for claims against BenchMark Finance in connection with the quotations available at that time or the lack of quotes for trading products

2.12. Exchange (regulated and/or unregulated market)

The rules of the respective exchange regulate trading in the underlying instruments and thus indirectly affect the trading of BenchMark Finance products. All exchange rules can be relevant to the financial products offered by BenchMark Finance, so you should read them carefully. The rules of the various exchanges are beyond the control of BenchMark Finance and are subject to change at any time and without notice.

2.13. Conflict of interest

Trading with instruments which are offered by BenchMark Finance has a risk of conflict of interest, as BenchMark Finance is your counterpart, acts as the publisher of the products it offers for trading and determines their price.

The policy of BenchMark Finance, as the publisher of the offered trading products, is that BenchMark Finance provides only the price of the product (quotation) and does not act as an intermediary to the client in the transaction. The client can reduce the risk of unfavorable or opaque pricing (which means that it is not clear how the price relates to the market for the underlying instrument) by observing BenchMark Finance pricing and the market where the underlying derivative is traded.

The other commercial activities of BenchMark Finance, in cases where BenchMark Finance acts as a broker for its clients in the provision of brokerage services or trades on its own account, are not related to the services related to the offering of products issued by BenchMark Finance.

2.14. Formation of product quotations

BenchMark Finance determines the prices at which it quotes the derivative products offered, by directly referring to the market value received from BenchMark Finance suppliers for the underlying instrument, exchange or market, which in turn affects the price of the instrument.

If BenchMark Finance can not directly rely on the market value which is received from its suppliers (for example due to a problem with the trading system or the data information service) or trade with the principal instrument is stopped, BenchMark Finance can exercise its right to assessment to determine the price at which to quote a product or to temporarily cease trading.

Due to the nature of BenchMark Finance products and in accordance with the market practice for such pricing tools, BenchMark Finance's judgment will be based on supplier prices without any conditions, restrictions or criteria for determining quotations for the products offered. Although there are no specific discretion limits, BenchMark Finance respects its obligations and acts objectively, honestly, transparently and fairly in pricing.

2.15. Regulatory risk

A client may suffer losses caused by actions taken by a regulatory authority that are beyond the control of BenchMark Finance. For example, actions taken by a regulatory authority exercising its powers during a market emergency may ultimately result in losses to the customer due to the effect of those actions on the underlying underlying instrument and thus on trading conditions. BenchMark Finance derivative. In an emergency, the regulatory authority may suspend trading or change the value/price at which a transaction/position is executed or established, which will affect the price/value of an underlying instrument, thereby affecting the value of the BenchMark Finance product.

2.16. Client's default rights

If a client fails to meet the margin requirements and/or fails to provide in due time the security required for securing its position in products issued by BenchMark Finance, or fails to fulfill its obligation under a transaction, BenchMark Finance has the relevant powers it can assume in its protection under the General Terms and Conditions for trading in financial instruments. In this case, BenchMark Finance has the right to close all or part of the client's positions, to sell at its discretion its financial instruments, or to determine and accrue interest rates or additional commissions to retain the client's positions in BenchMark Finance products.

2.17. Risk associated with the devices used by the customer and the quality of the Internet connection

Products offered for trading by BenchMark Finance are usually traded over the Internet, with the client using a computer, mobile phone with internet (smartphone) or tablet. This means that the customer is at risk of disrupting the ability to trade online electronically, resulting in delayed execution of her orders or non-arrival of orders, or failure to execute already placed orders, or execution of withdrawn orders, such as and the inability to access trading platforms and the like.

This risk, in addition to good internet connectivity, also includes the stability and reliability of the client device, its computer or other mobile device through which it has access to the internet and to trading platforms. BenchMark Finance shall not be liable in the event of losses due to delays, errors, technical malfunctions of the client's hardware or software products or systems, or inability to operate in operations beyond the control of BenchMark Finance, resulting in damage or instability of the client's platform for reasons in the connection device through which the customer operates with the trading platform.

3. Rules for forming margin requirements

BenchMark Finance applies the following basic principles when determining margin requirements::

- Each client that trades CFDs must provide the required amount to cover the margin requirement before she can open a position in BenchMark Finance product;
- Margin requirement is determined by BenchMark Finance and is based on a number of factors, including the market price of the underlying instrument, BenchMark Finance's risk assessment for the client, the client's exposure to a product, and the available cash on the account;
- Margin requirement on any client's account is adjusted promptly in accordance with market movements or changes in our risk assessment on each client's account;
- Each client must ensure the margin requirements set by BenchMark Finance and maintain the required amount of margin coverage at any time. Otherwise, BenchMark Finance will shut off one, several or all open positions of the client. If the cash balance on the customer's account is negative after a Stop out, the customer remains obliged to pay the amount of the negative cash balance.

3.1. Margin maintenance

The client needs to have enough cash in his account to cover the margin requirements for opening positions in BenchMark Finance products. The client deposits the necessary amount to cover the required margin through a bank transfer. The deposited amount is then deposited into the client's trading account.

3.2. How margin is calculated

The margin requirement is determined by BenchMark Finance and is calculated as a percentage or fixed value of the full market value of the product that the customer wishes to trade.

In rare cases in more volatile markets, the amount of margin required may change temporarily after a position has been opened in a product issued by BenchMark Finance. If this happens, BenchMark Finance may ask the customer to pay an amount to cover the additional margin requirements, since the amount initially paid has become insufficient. The required margin amounts are calculated to cover the maximum expected market movement at any time.

Example of calculating margin coverage level: A client deposits $ 10,000 in her trading account and opens a position in a product for which BenchMark Finance has set a $ 8,000 margin. Subsequently, there are fluctuations in the market and the client has accumulated loss of $ 2,000. As a result, the free funds on the trading account are fully utilized and the client will no longer be able to open new positions (except only reduce his exposure by closing part of it) and there is a risk that the client's position will be automatically closed if additional unfavorable price movements follow.

According to BenchMark Finance's General Terms and Conditions, clients has an obligation to maintain the margin and provide the necessary amounts to meet the margin requirements, which arise from the moment they open a position. It is clients' responsibility to monitor their positions and to ensure that they have the required margin level. Customers are notified of the changed margin requirements in one of three ways: through the trading platform, on the BenchMark Finance website, or by email. Should there be a need to secure a certain margin level, clients must provide additional funds to meet the margin requirements, whether or not BenMark Finance has contacted and informed them.

3.3. Margin Call

The Client is obliged to maintain the required amount of margin, and is also required to comply with the margin call notifications received and to provide the additional amount required to meet the margin requirements.

Under unusually volatile market conditions or sharp price movements and a margin call received, the customer may need to react, have little or no time to pay, or the customer may receive more than one margin call within 24 hours.

Clients are obliged to receive the margin call, regardless of whether they have seen and read the margin call notification in the trading platform.

3.4. Stop out

If clients do not have sufficient funds to satisfy the margin requirement for the relevant instrument in which they have an open position and do not have sufficient cash in the account (including profits or losses from open positions or other assets or amounts held as approved collateral), BenchMark Finance may close one, several open positions.

3.5. Negative account balance

If the client has a negative balance on his/her account, i.e. the amount available in the trading account is negative (less than zero), then the client must deposit additional money in order to restore the cash balance in the account to a positive value.

3.6. Closing of positions and withdrawal of funds

If a customer closes a position by making a profit and his account has a net credit balance that covers the minimum required margin (in case there are other open positions), he can withdraw the free funds from his account. BenchMark Finance checks and after finding that there will be no breach of the margin requirements, the amount claimed will be paid.

5. Examples of trading

5.1. Spot Forex

5.1.1. Long position (Buying)

The market price of EURUSD is 1.10499/1.10500 and a client estimates that the euro (EUR) will rise in price against the US dollar (USD) and wants to take advantage of this upward movement. Therefore this client decides to buy 100,000 EURUSD currency units at a price of 1.10500.

Two days later, the euro has risen against the US dollar and the customer decides to make a profit by closing the long position at EURUSD.

EURUSD's current market price is already at 1.10600/1.10601. The amount of profit the client will make from the transaction before adjustments and taxes is $100. Profit/loss is calculated by multiplying the change in price (closing price minus opening price) by the volume of the position, i.e. the difference between 1.10600 and 1.10500 (= 0.00100 or 10 pips) x 100,000 = $100.

Assumptions

Financial corrections

If a customer opens and closes a spot forex position within the same trading day, then the position is not subject to financial corrections. The open positions held at the end of the trading day (17:00 New York time) are transferred to the next business day. The applicable adjustments are reflected in the platform swap column. These adjustments are based on the following components:

Tom/Next interest rate swap

The transfer of a position for the next business day is done by moving the value date for the respective position to a new value date, with the first possible business day. The standard value date for major currency pairs is T+2 working days. The value date of the foreign exchange spot positions held at 17:00 New York time is transferred with a new value date, which is the next business day. As part of the transfer, positions are subject to interest rate swap for the next day's retention.

The amount of the swap is based on Tom/Next (Tomorrow/Next) interest rates from the interbank forward market of Tier-1 banks, with the value obtained directly from BenchMark Finance's liquidity providers. It can be positive or negative. The main components of the Tom/Next interest rate are based on the interest rate differential between the currencies involved in the currency pair, liquidity (in this case, liquidity in the forward market may be diminished due to upcoming important government elections, end of month, quarter, year, etc. .), demand on the interbank forward market, currency uncertainty, and important events affecting any of the currencies in the cross.

5.1.2. Short Position (Sale)

The market price of EURUSD is 1.10499/1.10500. The client estimates that the euro (EUR) will become cheaper against the US dollar (USD) and wants you to take advantage of this downward movement. Therefore, it decided to sell 100,000 EURUSD currency units at 1.10500.

Two days later, the dollar rose against the euro and the customer decided to make a profit by closing the short position at EURUSD.

The current market price of EURUSD is already at 1.10398/1.10399. The amount of profit the client will make from the transaction before adjustments and taxes is $100. Profit/loss is calculated by multiplying the change in price (closing price minus opening price) by the volume of the position, i.e. the difference between 1.10499 and 1.10399 (= 0.00100 or 10 pips) x 100,000 = $100

If a client opens and closes a spot forex position within the same trading day, then his position is not subject to financial corrections. The open positions held at the end of the trading day (17:00 New York time) are transferred to the next business day. Applicable adjustments are charged to the customer's account in the Swap column. These adjustments are based on the following components.

Tom/Next interest rate swap

The transfer of position for the next business day is done by moving the value date for the respective position to a new value date, with the first possible business day. The standard value date for major currency pairs is T+2 working days. The value date of the currency spot positions held at 5:00 PM New York time (00:00 Bulgarian time) is transferred with a new value date, which is the next business day. As part of the transfer, positions are subject to interest rate swap for the next day's retention.

The amount of swap is based on Tom/Next (Tomorrow/Next) interest rates from the interbank forward market of Tier-1 banks, with the value obtained directly from BenchMark Finance's liquidity providers. 5.2. CFD on shares

5.2.1. Long Positions (Buying)

Example for buying a CFD on shares: The market price of XYZ's shares on the relevant exchange is currently $12.00/$12.02. A client believes that XYZ's shares are undervalued and will rise in price, so the client decides to buy 1,000 CFD at $12.02 each. Therefore, this position gives the client an equity exposure of $12,020 (price x number of CFDs).

The position requires a margin of 10% of the deal value ($1,202).

A month later (30 days), XYZ's shares have risen and they are trading for $12.52. The client decides to collect the accumulated profit by closing this position. The amount of profit that the client will make before adjustments and transaction tax is $500 (difference between $12.02 and $12.52 x $1,000 = $500).

Corrections

XYZ has paid a dividend - $0.10 per share. Therefore, the customer is entitled to a positive dividend adjustment of $100 (1000 shares x $0.10). This amount is credited to the account in the swap column.

CFDs on shares are subject to a transaction fee. The commission is charged both for opening and closing a position. The benchmark commission for BenchMark Finance for US stock trading is $0.05/share. In this example, a transaction fee will be charged for each transaction as follows:

$$1000 \times 0.05 \text{ USD} = 50 \text{ USD.}$$

As the client holds a long-term CFD position in equities, he/she will incur interest expenses to hold the position. These costs are calculated on the basis of interest rate + markup. In this example, if the basic interest rate + the markup is 5%, the daily interest rate per day is as follows:

$$1000 \times 12.02 \text{ USD} \times 5\% / 360 = 1.669 \text{ USD per day.}$$

CFD share XYZ (USD)	Open	Close
Direction	Buy	Sell
Number of CFDs	1000	1000
Price	12.02 USD	12.52 USD
Value	12 020 USD	12 520 USD
Commission	50 USD	50 USD

Profit/Loss calculation
Gross P/L	+500 USD	(12 520 USD – 12 020 USD)
Dividend	+100 USD	(0.10 USD x 1000)
Commission	-100 USD	2 x 0.05 USD x 1000
Swap	-50.07 USD	30 days x 1.669 USD/day
Net Profit/Loss	+449.93 USD	Before taxes

5.2.2 Short positions (Sell)

Example for selling CFD on shares: The market price of the shares of XYZ on the relevant exchange at a given time is $25.00/$25.10. The client believes that XYZ's shares are overvalued and will become cheaper, so the client decides to sell (short position) 500 CFD at $25.00. Therefore, this position gives the client an equity exposure of $12,500 (price x number of CFDs).

The position requires a margin of 10% of deal nominal ($1,250).

The price of the underlying share rises to $28.00 over the next 10 days. As a result, if a client chooses to close the position. The gross loss is $1500:(500 x 25.00 USD) - (500 x 28.00 USD) = -1500 USD.

Corrections

CFDs on shares are subject to transaction fees. The commission is charged both for opening and closing a position. The benchmark commission for BenchMark Finance for US stock trading is $0.05/share. In this example, a transaction fee will be charged for each transaction as follows:

$$500 \times 0.05 \text{ USD} = 25 \text{ USD.}$$

As the client holds a long-term CFD position in equities, he/she has interest costs to hold the position. These costs are calculated on the basis of interest rate + markup. if the basic interest rate + the markup is 5%, the daily interest rate per day is as follows:

$$500 \times 25.00 \text{ USD} \times 5\% / 360 = 1.736 \text{ USD per day.}$$

CFD share XYZ (USD)	Open	Close
Direction	Sell	Buy

Number of CFD's	500	500
Price	25.00 USD	28.00 USD
Value	12 500 USD	14 000 USD
Commission	25 USD	25 USD

Profit/Loss calculation
Gross P/L	-1500 USD	(12 500 USD – 14 000 USD)
Dividend	0 USD
Commission	-50 USD	2 x 0.05 USD x 500
Swap	-17.36 USD	10 days x 1.736 USD/day
Net Profit/Loss	-1567.36 USD	Before taxes

5.3. CFD on indexes

5.3.1. Long Position (Buying)

An example of buying an index CFD: with a long position a client profits when the market is moving upwards.

Example: A client thinks that the leading US index SPX500 will go up, so she buys 10 CFDs on the SPX500 at 2,500 points (USD), so this position gives an effective exposure to the SPX500 index of $25,000 (index value X number of CFDs). The position requires a fixed margin of $400. BenchMark Finance does not charge commissions for CFD trading with indices.

The SPX500 index has risen over the next 5 days, reaching 2 580 points. As a result, if a client chooses to close a position, the gross profit from this transaction will be $800: $(10 \times $ 2,580) - (10 \times $ 2,500) = \800 (before adjustments and taxes).

Corrections

As the client holds a CFD position, interest rate expenses are charged by applying the applicable basic interest rate + markup.

The opening price of the position is 2,500 points and for the purposes of the example the interest rate is 3%, the interest payable per day is calculated as follows:

$$10 \times 2\,500 \text{ USD} \times 3\% / 360 = 2.083 \text{ USD per day}$$

CFD index (USD)	Open	Close
Direction	Buy	Sell
Number of CFD's	10	10
Price	2 500 USD	2 580 USD
Value	25 000 USD	25 800 USD

Profit/Loss calculation
--------------------------------	--	--

Gross P/L	+800 USD	(25 800 USD – 25 000 USD)
Swap	-10.42 USD	5 days x 2.083 USD/day
Net P/L	+789.58 USD	Before taxes

5.3.2. Short Position (Selling)

Example for selling an index CFD and realization of losses as the market moves against the customer's position. The customer believes that the leading NAS100 technology index will be cheaper and sells 5 NAS100 indexes at 6,100 points (USD). Therefore, this position gives an effective exposure to the NAS100 index of $30,500 (index value x number of CFDs). The position requires a fixed margin of $500.

BenchMark Finance does not charge commissions for trading CFDs on indices.

The US NAS100 Index is moving up over the next 5 days to 6,300 points (USD). As a result, if a client decides to close a position, the gross loss from this transaction will be $1,000: (5 x 6,100 USD) - (5 x 6,300 USD) = -1,000 USD (before adjustments and taxes).

Corrections

As the client holds a CFD position, interest rate expenses are charged by applying the applicable basic interest rate + markup.

The opening price of the position is 6,100 points and for the purposes of the example the interest rate is 2%, the interest payable per day is calculated as follows:

$$5 \times 6\,100 \text{ USD} \times 2\% / 360 = 1.694 \text{ USD per day}$$

CFD index (USD)	Open	Close
Direction	Sell	Buyl
Number of CFD's	5	5
Price	6 100 USD	6 300 USD
Value	30 500 USD	31 500 USD

Profit/Loss calculation
Gross P/L	-1000 USD	(30 500 USD – 31 500 USD)
Swap	-8.47 USD	5 days X 1.694 USD/day
Net Profit/Loss	-1008.47 USD	Before taxes

5.4. Futures CFD (including maturing and non-maturing goods, etc.)

5.4.1. Long position (Buying)

An example of opening a long position in a futures CFD in which the client opens a long position that generates a loss because the market moves against the client's position.

The market price of crude oil (USOIL) is 56.00 / 56.05 USD. The customer believes USOIL is undervalued and will rise in price and decides to buy 200 CFD in crude oil worth $ 56.05 each.

Therefore, this position in USOIL has a face value of $ 11,210 (price x the number of CFDs). The position requires a fixed margin of $ 180.

Fifteen days later, the price of CFD on USOIL has dropped and is trading at 53.00 / 53.05 USD per barrel. The client decides to close the loss by closing the USOIL position at $ 53.00 a barrel.

The gross loss a customer will incur is \$610: $(200 \times 56.05 \text{ USD}) - (200 \times 53.00 \text{ USD}) = -610 \text{ USD}$ (before adjustments and taxes).

Corrections

As the position is in maturing oil future, which will expire on certain maturity day, the position is not subject to daily interest and no interest is due because of the transfer of the position.

CFD futures (USD)	Open	Close
Direction	Buy	Sell
Number of CFD's	200	200

Gross P/L	-610 USD	(10 600 USD – 11 210 USD)
Swap	0 USD	It is not due to a maturing instrument
Net Profit/Loss	-610.00	Before taxes

5.4.2. Short position (Selling)

An example of selling futures CFDs, in which a client takes a short position and makes a profit as the market moves in the direction of his position.

The market price of crude oil (USOIL) is 56.00 / 56.05 USD. The customer thinks USOIL is overpriced and will go down and decides to sell US $ 200 CFD at $ 56.00 a barrel. Therefore, the net position value is $ 11,200 (price x number of CFDs). The position requires an initial margin of $ 180.

Ten days later, the price of CFD on USOIL has dropped and is now trading at 54.00 / 54.05 USD per barrel. The client decided to make his profit by closing his position at USOIL at $ 54.05 a barrel.

The gross profit the customer will make is $ 390: $(200 \times 56.00 \text{ USD}) - (200 \times 54.05 \text{ USD}) = \390 (before adjustments and taxes).

Correction

As the position is in maturing oil, which will expire on a certain maturity day, the position is not subject to daily interest and no interest is due because of the transfer of the position.
